COURT RULES DISTASIOS MUST DIE

Picture on Page 16

By a ruling of the Supreme Court today, Massachusetts will soon have, for the first time in its history, an execution of a father and son in the electric chair.

In a 19-page opinion, written by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg, the full bench of the Supreme Court upheld the verdict of guilty returned against Anthony Di Stasio, 23, of Revere, by a Middlesex County jury June 2, 1936.

He was found guilty of being an accessory before the fact to the Hudson "torch" murder of Daniel Crowley of the West End on May 6, 1935.

MANDATORY PENALTY

The mandatory penalty is death in the electric chair—the same that faces the youth's father, Frank Di Stasio, 54, a Revere candymaker.

The father was convicted of first degree murder in connection with the same crime and sentence was postponed pending the Supreme Court decision on his son's appeal.

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop, informed of the Supreme Court's ruling, declared:

"Both will be sentenced within two or three days."

The case of young Di Stasio is unique, in that it was the second in the history of the state where a defendant was convicted on an accessory charge carrying death as the penalty.

Anthony had been originally charged with murder, but was cleared by a directed verdict. The accessory charge was brought against him immediately, however.

Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for young Di Stasio, had filed 23 assignments of error in an attempt to save Anthony.

Scharton's principal argument was based on the contention that the appointment of Judge Thomas H. Dowd, the judge of the trial, was invalid. Judge Dowd was appointed by former Governor Curley.

Scharton contended that former Governor Curley could not have legally appointed Judge Dowd since he (Curley) himself had not been legally in office since he was sworn in as chief executive by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook and not by the president of the Senate, according to the state constitution.

COURT RULING

In its ruling, upholding the guilty verdict, the Supreme Court declared:

"These matters cannot be decided in these proceedings. The principal question relates to the authority of the trial judge. The status of the governor who appointed him is relevant only as it throws light on that inquiry.

"The decisions are numerous that such a question cannot be raised collaterally in a situation like the present if the officer whose authority is assailed holds office de facto and is not a mere intruder or usurper.

"It is claimed from the record that the trial judge is a de facto officer and not a mere interloper.

"Evidence warrants that the defendant counselled and aided in the perpetration of the murder in the sense that he joined in the plan and assisted in its execution."

Ann Marsters IN Hollywood

A NEW SERIES

Here's little Freddie Bartholomew, boy cavalier of the screen, in a solemn discussion with Ann Marsters, Boston's girl reporter, about whether or not he should attend Harvard when he grows up. In another installment of her new and exclusive series on Hollywood, Miss Marsters tells Freddie about Harvard and Freddie tells Miss Marsters of his cherished plans for the future. Day by day, follow this series in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

CHAPTER 6

Hollywood, Cal., May 28—A young actor named Freddie Bartholomew sat in his dressing room at M-G-M studios and launched into a serious discussion. It was about his future; about just where he was planning to acquire his "higher education."

"I think," said Freddie, solemnly, "that I should like to go to Harvard. I have heard quite a lot about it, and it sounds fine."

Freddie has been thinking for several months about going to Harvard, and already he has sent for and received the Harvard catalogue, along with a nice letter from some Harvard authority telling him how delighted they'd be to have him attend that university. Freddie said that the letter and cata-

9 Trucks Banned By Registry Aide

Registrations of nine trucks owned by Coleman Brothers, Inc., Boston contractors, were suspended today by Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles Anthony Bonzagni after a private hearing. Today's action followed a complaint that the contractor's trucks exceeded the width permitted by law.

Somerville Men Victims in Crash

Marlborough, Conn., May 28 (AP)—Two Somerville, Mass., men were injured today when a truck in which they were riding, loaded with bottled soda, crashed against a stone wall and overturned here.

The men, taken to Hartford Hospital, were: Joseph Granelli, 27, of 9 Arnold court; and Edward Donovan, 28, the driver, of 18 Nevada avenue.

SCHOOL GIRL MISSING FOR TWO DAYS

While frantic parents anxiously awaited word, police today sought 10-year-old Charlotte Cameron, who disappeared from school in Jamaica Plain yesterday morning.

She left home cheerfully yesterday on her way to her sixth grade classes at the Theodore Roosevelt school, her parents said. At midmorning recess she vanished.

They have had no word of her since.

Her mother is frantic with grief and her father, Clifford Cameron of Dixwell street, passed a sleepless night at the little home.

CALLED GOOD PUPIL

She has never been away from home before, and fear for her safety mounted today as the hours slowly passed.

Gloria is a good student in her sixth grade class, teaches said.

She was dressed, her mother said, in her school clothes when she left—brown one-piece dress, blue coat, tan moccassins and yellow socks.

A little figure, four feet tall, weighing about 60 pounds, she has brown hair and brown eyes, and a pretty, ruddy complexion.

NO OTHERS MISSING

At first she was believed to have run away with a playmate, but no other children in the vicinity have been reported missing.

Relatives to whom she might possibly have gone have been unable to furnish information about the child's whereabouts.

Now having spent a cold, rainy night away from home—in what kind of shelter, no one knows—and with another chill day wearing away, police fear for her safety.

She had no money when she left home, nor any lunch.

Senate Kills Bill to Boost Dog 'Take'

In a surprise move today the State Senate killed a bill by a vote of 17 to 15 which would have increased the state's revenue from dog tracks.

The bill, which was reported adversely by the Senate ways and means committee, sought to increase the state's percentage from 3½ per cent to 4 per cent on the first $100,000 bet, and 5 per cent on any amount over.

ELDER WAITS BAIL AS GUN IS HUNTED

A missing gun, allegedly used to threaten S. Allen Norton, former cashier at Mount Hermon School for Boys, was sought by police of two states today in woods and ponds at Greenfield and in two New Hampshire towns.

Meanwhile in Franklin County jail, Dr. Thomas E. Elder tirelessly paced his cell, expecting momentarily $10,000 bail promised to his loyal wife by relatives.

Elder is charged with assault with intent to kill Norton.

News of a concentrated search for a weapon came with orders from state police headquarters for recruits from several western barracks and information that the hunt would be pressed in all territory surrounding Greenfield.

PLAN TO REVEAL FEUD

Authorities also declared that new and surprising evidence would be introduced in Greenfield superior court on June 3 which will explain the feud between the former dean and Norton.

The feud, already admitted by both the former school colleagues, is to be brought into the open for the first time, according to both police and prosecutors.

Haggard and nervous, Elder spent a restless night in jail and today reiterated his innocence of any connection with the alleged threats made Tuesday night as

Cochrane Doctors Fear Meningitis

New York, May 28 (AP)—Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, was reported by his physicians today as being slightly improved, although his physicians said there was still a possibility meningitis might develop.

The veteran player, felled by a pitched ball here Tuesday, is mentally alert, Dr. Byron Stookey and Dr. Robert Emmett Walsh said in a bulletin issued at 9 a. m. today.

"His temperature, however, has remained elevated and we are still fearful of meningitis," they said.

Ban of Bicycles On Common Urged

Complaints of injuries caused by bicyclists on Boston Common today brought a request from Park Commissioner William P. Long for a police ban of bicycles on both the Common and Public Garden.

Commissioner Long suggested to Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty that an old city ordinance relative to the use of bicycles on city sidewalks might be invoked.

HOLD TICKETS ON DERBY ENTRIES

Into the laps of New Englanders, including an ill Lynn couple and other residents of Greater Boston, rained money today as the giant drum of fortune rolled at the Irish Sweepstakes drawing at Dublin.

Those drawing starting horses in the Epsom Downs Derby, to be run next Wednesday in England, have a chance to win $150,000, $75,000 or $50,000, and each drawing a non-starter is assured of $2233.

One hundred consolation prizes of $500 each will be awarded while there will be ten residual prizes of $31,116 each. Tickets on both these awards will be drawn tomorrow.

Eight residents of Massachusetts, six of whom live in Greater Boston, drew starting horses in the first drawings today. Five drawing starting horses live in Connecticut, one in Providence, R. I., and one at Limerick, Me.

FAIL TO FIND HOLDER

A South End ticket holder, who gave the name of "Bill Waiting," was among the first six drawn but up to mid-afternoon he or she had not been identified. Reporters had been unable to find anyone to claim ownership of the ticket at the address written on the ticket.

The ticket is on the horse "Cashbook," the second favorite in the Derby. This same horse will carry the hopes of Alton E. Chase of Bennington, Cape Cod; Angelina Verrastro of Stamford, Ct., and M. Visco of Greenwich avenue, New Haven.

Wellesley Town Safe Foils Yeggs

Unable to open a 400-pound safe containing $150, thieves during the night carried it from the office of the tax collector in Wellesley Town Hall and abandoned it in the rear of the building, Wellesley police reported today.

Entrance into the town hall was made by forcing a rear window of the building.

Tax Collector Arthur K. Wells discovered the theft this morning. He said the safe containing the money had been in another section. The combination of which had been broken.

In a routine inspection around the building after the theft was reported, Patrolman James Keefe found the stolen safe.

200 KILLED AS REBEL AIR BOMBERS BLAST VALENCIA

NORMAN THOMAS AND OTHER AMERICANS ESCAPE HARM

Valencia, Spain, May 28 (AP)—Five Insurgent planes, described by competent observers as Italian Capronis, carried out a terrific bombardment of Valencia before dawn today and killed an estimated 200 persons.

Droning in from the sea and down on this temporary capital of the Spanish government an hour before daybreak, the planes dropped fifty 500-pound bombs.

By noon, 76 of the dead had been identified.

NORMAN THOMAS UNHURT

The American consul, Milton K. Wells, was caught in a rain of debris, but was unhurt. Several Americans, including Norman Thomas, the United States Socialist, and his wife were housed a few hundred feet from where three bombs fell.

The building housing the American embassy was damaged, but not the embassy itself. No American was reported hurt.

An English boat, the Cadin, anchored in the harbor, was reported sunk, with seven crew members killed and eight injured. Other reports said a bomb also fell on the English steamer Pinzon.

Sleeping men, women and children were blown from their beds to a terrible death. Some of them were pitched into the street from upper stories.

HUNDREDS WOUNDED

At least 50 buildings were wrecked. Bombs falling in the streets ripped steel shutters from windows. Some of them demolished only the front walls of houses. Thousands of windows were shattered.

Many persons were injured and many were unaccounted for, with rescue workers finding more bodies hourly as they cleared debris.

The building housing the Paraguay consulate was wrecked and seven occupants were killed, but Consul Carlos Dupuy and his wife, mother, sister and four children escaped injury. The Paraguayan flag was torn in shreds.

The Red Cross emergency hospital, where scores of wounded were treated, was itself hit.

The hospital bore a huge painted red cross on its roof. A large Red Cross flag flew in front.

At daybreak, barefooted mothers, carrying children in their arms, men bearing wounded on their shoulders, still were straggling into the hospitals.

They Plan Fight Together

MRS. ELDER — THOMAS E. ELDER

Boston Evening American Photo

Former Dean of Mt. Hermon School for Boys, Thomas E. Elder, and Mrs. Elder, taking walk. Photo made a year or more ago. Elder expects to be released from Franklin County jail today where he has been held on charge of "assault with intent to kill." His wife is helping him in his fight to prove his innocence.

ELDER AWAITS BAIL AS GUN IS HUNTED

Norton stepped from his Greenfield garage.

WILL PLAN HIS FIGHT

The former educator, who since has turned to poultry raising, was buoyed by the news that bail had been promised by a relative in Vermont, who already is speeding to free him.

Dr. Elder said he would leave at once to join his wife and son. They will plan the battle which all three confidently maintain will bring freedom for the accused mentor at the June 3 hearing.

In addition to the gun search, state police also were in Keene, in the process of questioning guests of a hotel where Elder and his wife insist they spent last Tuesday.

New Hampshire authorities aided the Massachusetts investigators and also paid a visit to the Elder home at Alton Bay.

Among leaders in the investigation were Lieutenant Maurice Neligan, attached to the district attorney's office in Franklin county, who played a leading part in the investigation of the three-year-old, still unsolved campus murder of Dr. Elliott Speer, Mount Hermon headmaster.

WANTS SUSPICION ENDED

Calmly confident that her husband's arrest will result in exoneration for all time, Mrs. Elder today awaited at Alton Bay, N. H. for his release and planned to aid him in his coming court appearance.

"It has been plain persecution," she declared in soft, cultural tones.

"It is a persecution which has continued for two and a half years and I guess I am glad that it all has finally happened. I want all suspicion in the Speer case cleared up forever."

The slight, gray-haired woman talked quietly and supremely confident today in telling of her happy life on a New Hampshire poultry farm following the hectic days of the Speer murder and her husband's later resignation as school head.

"As I have told the police, I was with my husband every moment at Keene," she continued. "He did not leave me and he was not the man who Mr. Norton says threatened him.

"I am not worried over the outcome. I have no reason to be. I know my husband is innocent. It seems they are just out to get him.

"It is true that there has been friction between Mr. Norton and my husband, but Mr. Norton has made a sad mistake this time.

"You perhaps noticed that Mr. Norton said that it was a shotgun with which he was threatened. You must remember that Dr. Speer was killed with a shotgun.

SON RUSHES HOME

"My husband is a brilliant man and a fine one. For two years, now, we have been happy here in New Hampshire away from all of that awful former trouble. I escaped most of it for I guess I was the only one on the campus they didn't question in the Speer murder."

With her here was her son, Thomas E. Elder, Jr., strapping six-foot Colby College student, who hitch-hiked home from the Maine college today.

He wanted to go at once to Greenfield but decided to remain at his mother's side when he heard that an uncle was to bail his father today. It was the same son who yesterday sent a message to his father in jail to "fight and give them all you have."

Neighbors in the quiet New Hampshire country town dropped in today as usual with a word for Mrs. Elder. They were words of cheer and offers of help. All voiced their confidences that the Elders would soon be back at work on their poultry farm.

There was not a note of vindictiveness in the tones of the educator's wife as she talked calmly and softly of the case which has temporarily separated her and her husband.

CERTAIN OF FREEDOM

Following revelation of the alleged threat on Norton's life, Secretary Roberts of the Northfield school, who has been designated as the official school recipient of all information relating to the Speer case, instructed all present employes of the school, and all past employes, to report anything suspicious.

Attorney Charles R. Fairhurst, counsel for Elder, was confident his client would be a free man today and would remain free.

He said $10,000 in certified checks would be tendered for the release of the ex-dean. This amount was raised largely through the efforts of Mrs. Elder to interest relatives in the plight of her husband.

The money was gathered among five Vermont and New Hampshire men, four of whom stipulated that their names be kept out of print.

He stated Elder would insist on an immediate hearing and fight any attempt at delays.

In a talk with reporters, Elder elaborated on the incident of his meeting a man in the hotel corridor, declaring the man would be present as a witness at Thursday's trial.

"At 10:30 that night I left my room in my pajamas and I walked through the corridor on the third floor of the hotel to a washroom," Elder said. "On the way I met a man and he said 'Good evening,' and I returned the salutation."

In defense of his client Attorney Fairhurst issued the following statement:

"Mr. Elder was arrested on complaint of Mr. Norton, a retired cashier of the Mt. Hermon school. The complaint charges that last Tuesday night Mr. Elder attempted assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill Mr. Norton shortly before 11 p. m.

"Mr. Norton is sure of the time of night. He says it was a few minutes before 11. Assuming that it was 11 p. m., it would have been impossible for Mr. Elder to have traveled that distance between Greenfield and Keene, N. H., a good fast hour's ride by automobile either way, and be at Mr. Norton's garage door and in his pajamas on the third floor at the hotel at that hour of the night.

"There can't be any question in anyone's mind that if Mr. Elder was walking the third floor in the hotel in Keene, 40 miles from Greenfield, at the hour when Mr. Norton was assaulted in the garage of his home in Greenfield, then that man who attempted to kill Mr. Norton couldn't have been and wasn't Mr. Elder.

"STILL FURTHER PROOF"

"In addition to that we have further proof that will stand a legal test in court to support the former dean's story that he was not the man who committed the assault on Mr. Norton."

Kin of John Alden Divorced From Paul Revere

Mrs. Dorothy Brown Revere of Cohasset, prominent society woman and direct descendant of John Alden, was granted an uncontested divorce from her husband, Paul Revere, great-great-great-grandson of the famous patriot, by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk probate court today.

The divorce, obtained on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, was heard earlier in the week by Judge McCoole in Brookline court.

Judge McCool ordered the husband to pay his wife the sum of $150 monthly and she is also to receive 20 per cent of his annual earnings over $3000.

Custody of their son, Paul, Jr., was awarded the mother, and the husband was also ordered to defray his educational expenses. The child was also allowed to visit his father every other week-end and also to spend part of his summer vacation with him.

During the divorce hearing, Mrs. Revere told the court that her husband continually used profane language and also on several occasions he threatened to shoot her with a shotgun.

The couple were maried in February, 1929, at a brilliant society wedding in the Back Bay. Mrs. Revere was the former Dorothy Frances Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner Brown of Brookline. They made their home in Cohasset during the past five years.

QUINS Birthday Is JOYOUS

KISSES BANNED GO ON RADIO;

By GRACE TROY
International News Service Correspondent

Corbiel, Ont., May 28.—Those five wee maidens—the famous Dionne quintuplets—were an eyeful of happiness today as they celebrated their third birthday in fine, robust health.

They frolicked around happily, unmindful of the fuss of the occasion. They took the sight of five birthday cakes (15 candles) in stride, seemed equally unconcerned over the act that late this afternoon they go on the air with a "birthday broadcast."

They woke at 6:30 a. m. as usual and had their orange juice a little later. Then all five—Cecile, Marie, Annette, Emilie and Yvonne—had their sponge baths.

The quintuplets were dressed alike in snap frocks of figured print, with big bows tied at the waist and pink ribbons in their soft brown curls.

PLAY, BUT NO KISSES

Breakfast was then served: Porridge, coddled egg, rusks and milk.

At 8:30 a. m., full of pep and the joy of being three years old, the lovely five trooped out to their play pen to thrill their unseen audience for half an hour.

After a work-out on their kiddie-cars, Emilie good-naturedly gave Annette a joy ride in a red wagon, while Marie held forth on the teeter-totter, scolding her sisters, one by one, into taking turns on the other end.

Dr. Allen Dafoe, his ever-pleasant self, called early at the nursery and wished his charges a happy birthday.

I asked Dr. Dafoe if he had kissed the "quins", and he replied:

"No, we don't encourage kissing."

SLOW OF SPEECH

The doctor told me:

"They are normal children of three. Their weights are just right. However, they are not quite as tall as the average child of their age. They are a little slow in talking, but all multiple births are backward in this respect. And, furthermore, they were premature babies."

He chuckled as he added:

"But don't you worry. They can say all they need to. They understand each other and the nurses understand them. At present they are receiving pre-school training and know more than the average child of three."

Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne with and older brother and two sisters of the "quins"—Ernest, Rose and Theresa—attended mass at the parish church in Corbell.

Returning from church, Mrs. Dionne hurried across the road from her home to the nursery to cuddle her five three-year-olds. It was the last few minutes of the public showing when Mrs. Dionne walked into the playyard.

WELCOME MOTHER

Whoops of joy went up from the little girls as they ran to mamma. (It's quite a pile to cuddle five at once.) The mother was glowing with happiness as she cuddled and bestowed birthday kisses on each wee upturned face.

Suspect 15 minutes late will be the only change today in the "quins" usual routine. This break in the schedule is to allow the famous girls time to say "bon soir" to the millions of radio fans who will be awaiting their annual birthday party broadcast.

These figures show how the little girls have grown since birth:

VIRGINIA STEVENSON ANDERSON
Denies She Kept Previous Ventures Secret

HUBBY WANTS ANNULMENT; SHE ASKS FOR ALIMONY

New York, May 28—Another May and December romance is headed for the courts here it was learned today.

And it's getting pretty monotonous for beauteous Virginia Stevenson, who is only 20 and has been married three times.

Cause of the rift in her latest love, her husband declares, was her failure to tell him she'd been married twice before.

But that's all wrong, says petulant Virginia. The real reason her husband, Alvin Victor Anderson, scion of a wealthy Cliffside, N. J., machinery family, wants an annulment is because of his drinking, which caused him to "beat me unmercifully," she says.

Her husband not only knew about her other marriages, but he also knew an annulment decree from her second husband had not become final at the time of her third marriage May 2, 1936, in Atlanta, Ga., she indignantly insists.

So intense was Alvin's ardor that he refused to wait another month she declared and they were married right away.

Virginia's motion for counsel fees and temporary alimony is to be argued before Supreme Court Justice Valente June 4.

ACCUSED In Court by MOTHER

SAYS DAUGHTER A "DISGRACE"

With tears streaming down her cheeks, a Cambridge mother today testified in Middlesex probate court against her daughter.

Called as a witness in the divorce proceedings brought by her son-in-law, Ernest A. Nash, of Putnam avenue, Cambridge, against his wife, Grace M., Mrs. Annie T. Pattville, also of Putnam avenue, termed her daughter as a "disgrace to the family."

Talking directly to Judge Arthur Beane and in a low tone of voice that was interrupted with sobs and tears, the mother said:

"I know your honor that it seems odd for a mother to come into court and testify against her daughter, but she has abused her husband and children beyond reason.

TELLS OF BEATINGS

"She has been the worry of my life the way she has carried on and the manner in which she has beaten her children.

"Child Welfare agents visited the house on one occasion and found the children bearing black and blue marks. The children told the welfare officials that it was caused by an accident. They told me (meaning the children) that if they did not tell that story their mother would administer another beating.

"My heart has been broken by my daughter—she is a disgrace to me. It is hard for a mother to testify this way, so your honor knows it must be pretty bad.

HUSBAND "GOOD MAN"

"I have spent my life's savings trying to care for her children and I have found that her husband is a good man."

Following the mother's testimony court attaches had to assist her from the courtroom.

Before Mrs. Pattville's testimony the son-in-law was on the stand.

He told the court that his wife beat him in the presence of their five children and that she struck him with automobile axles, flat irons, stove lifters and kitchen chairs.

Duke and Wally Plan U. S. Visit

WINDSOR GETS ROYAL CASH

Monts, France, May 28 (AP)—An associate of the Duke of Winsor disclosed today that Edward and Mrs. Warfield were planning a visit to the United States as a "second honeymoon."

Under arrangements which the abdicated British King and his bride-to-be are considering, the associate said, their stay in the United States would be brief and part of a trip around the world.

Edward and the woman for whom he renounced his throne were said to have selected tentatively either October or November for the trip to America, traveling westward from Europe after spending their "first honeymoon" in Austria.

They will be married in the music room of the Chateau de Cande on June 3 and will leave shortly afterward by automobile on the trip that is expected to end at Castle Wasserleonburg in Austria, where preparations have been made to receive them.

Persons close to the chateau reported today the duke six days before his marriage, has been newly supplied with cash.

Sir Walter Monckton, attorney-general for the Duchy of Cornwall and Edward's legal adviser during the abdication crisis, was reported to have brought cash as well as wedding presents when he came by plane from London yesterday.

Herman L. Rogers, Windsor's American spokesman, declined to comment on reports Sir Walter had brought final papers of an agreement by the British royal family and government over Edward's financial allowances.

But persons at the chateau declared this was not Sir Walter's chief purpose. They said financial arrangements were completed before the duke's arrival here and that the envoy delivered money.

Still other sources discussed unconfirmed reports that a surprise visit by the Duke of Kent, Edward's favorite brother, might have been another discussion topic. Accounts did not say whether the supposed visit would be before, after or during the June 3 nuptials.

One of the duke's friends reported that Edward was searching through old address books for the names of friends he had met on a previous visit to the United States, as well as those of American acquaintances he has made in England and on the continent.

Rogers, American engineer who is a neighbor of President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., said he would probably return to the United States in October, but not necessarily with the honeymoon coupie.

ROYALTY Fight for WALLY LOST

London, May 28 (AP)—Friends of the Duke of Windsor said today they had received a telephone message direct from Edward which informed them that he had lost his fight to obtain for Wallis Warfield the title, "her royal highness."

An important announcement affecting the whole issue of the titles which the duke and his future wife will bear was expected shortly.

It was understood the announcement would take the form of "letters patent."

Crash Injury Kills Haverhill Woman

North Andover, May 28—Mrs. Lucy Larrabee, 55, of 112 How street, Haverhill, injured in an automobile accident, here, May 16, died early today at Lawrence General Hospital.

Mrs. Larrabee suffered internal injuries when the car in which she was a passenger with a student driver went out of control in Andover street and crashed into a tree.

Mrs. Walker Left $330,449 Estate

Mrs. Mary Emms Griffin Walker, who died here April 2, left an estate of $330,449, it was revealed by a petition for probate filed today in United States district court, Washington.

Mrs. Walker, widow of a member of the nationally-known family of distillers, bequeathed a valuable collection of 20 paintings to the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington.

ROCKEFELLER STARTED OUT IN DEBT

Always Ran Business On Borrowed Money

John D. Rockefeller starts in business for himself! How he began his rise from the financial scratch to become the world's colossus of capitol is vividly told herewith by the late philanthropist-financier in the fourth chapter of his autobiography. Just re printed in book form, this personal history was written by Rockefeller after he retired from active business.

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SR.

(Distributed Exclusively by Universal Service, by Special Arrangement With Doubleday Doran & Co. Reproduction in Whole or in Part Strictly Prohibited.)

The training that comes from working for some one else, to whom we feel a responsibility, I am sure was of great value to me.

I should estimate that the salaries of that time were far less than half of what is paid for equivalent positions today.

The next year I was offered a salary of $700 (by Hewitt & Tuttle, Mr. Rockefeller's first employers), but thought I was worth $800. We had not settled the matter by April, and as a favorable opportunity had presented itself for carrying on the same business on my own account, I resigned my position.

In those days, in Cleveland, everyone knew almost everyone else in town. Among the merchants was a young Englishman named M. B. Clark, perhaps ten years older than I, who wanted to establish a business and was in search of a partner.

He had $2000 to contribute to the firm, and wanted a partner who could furnish an equal amount. This seemed a good opportunity for me. I had saved up $700 or $800, but where to get the rest was a problem.

I talked the matter over with my father, who told me that he had always intended to give $1000 to each of his children when they reached 21. He said that if I wished to receive my share at once, instead of waiting, he would advance it to me and I could pay interest upon the sum until I was 21.

Forms Firm

"But, John," he added, "the rate is ten."

At that time, 10 per cent a year interest was a very common rate for such loans.

At the banks the rate might not have been quite so high; but, of course, the financial institutions could not supply all the demands, so there was much private borrowing at high figures.

As I needed the money for the partnership I gladly accepted my father's offer, and so began business as the junior partner of the new firm, which was called Clark & Rockefeller.

It was a great thing to be my own employer. Mentally I swelled with pride—a partner in a firm with $4000 capital!

Mr. Clark attended to the buying and selling and I took charge of the finance and the books. We at once began to do a large business, dealing in carload lots and cargoes of produce.

Naturally we soon needed more money to take care of the increasing trade. There was nothing to do but attempt to borrow from a bank. But would the bank help us?

I went to a bank president whom I knew and who knew me. I remember perfectly how anxious I was to get that loan and to establish myself favorably with the banker.

This gentleman was T. P. Handy, a sweet and gentle old man, well known as a high-grade, beautiful character. For 50 years he was interested in young men. He knew me as a boy in the Cleveland schools.

I gave him all the particulars of our business, telling him frankly about our affairs—what we wanted to use the money for, and so forth. I waited for the verdict with almost trembling eagerness.

"How much do you want?" he said.

Wise Words

"Two thousand dollars."

"All right, Mr. Rockefeller, you can have it," he replied. "Just give me your own warehouse receipts, they're good enough for me."

As I left that bank, by elation can hardly be imagined. I held up my head—think of it, a bank had trusted me for $2000! I felt that I was now a man of importance in the community.

For long years after, the head of this bank was a friend indeed: he loaned me money when I needed it, and I needed it almost all the time, and all the money he had.

About this time I began to go out and solicit business—a branch of work I had never before attempted. I undertook to visit every person in our part of the country who was in any way connected with the kind of business that we were engaged in, and went pretty well over the states of Ohio and Indiana.

I made up my mind that I could do this best by simply introducing our firm, and not pressing for immediate consignments. I told them that I represented Clark and Rockefeller, commission merchants, and that I had no wish to interfere with any connection that they had at present, but if the opportunity offered, we should be glad to serve them.

To our great surprise, business came in upon us so fast that we hardly knew how to take care of it. And in the first year our sales amounted to half a million dollars.

Then, and indeed for many years after, it seemed as though there was no end to the money needed to carry on and develop the business.

As our successes began to come, I seldom put my head upon the pillow at night without speaking a few words to myself in this wise:

"Now a little success, soon you will fall down, soon you will be overthrown. Because you have got a start, you think you are quite a merchant; look out, or you will lose your head—go steady."

These intimate conversations with myself, I am sure, had a great influence on my life. I was afraid I could not stand my prosperity and tried to teach myself not to get puffed up with any foolish notions.

My loans from my father were many. Our relations on finances were a source of some anxiety to me, and were not quite so humorous as they seem as I look back at them.

Occasionally he would come to me and say that if I needed money in the business he would be able to loan some, and as I always needed capital I was glad indeed to get it, even at 10 per cent interest. Just at the moment when I required the money most he was apt to say:

"My son, I find I have got to have that money."

"Of courses, you shall have it at once," I would answer, but knew that he was testing me, and that when I paid him, he would hold the money without its earning anything for a little time, and then offer it back later.

I confess that this little discipline should have done me good, and perhaps did, but while I concealed it from him, the truth is I was not particularly pleased with his application of tests to discover if my financial ability was equal to such shocks.

These experiences with my father remind me that in the early days there was often much discussion as to what should be paid for the use of money.

Goes After Cash

Many people protested that the rate of 10 per cent was outrageous, and none but a wicked man would exact such a charge.

I was accustomed to argue that money was worth what it would bring—no one would pay 10 per cent, or 5 per cent, or 3 per cent unless the borrower believed that at this rate it was profitable to employ it.

As I was always the borrower at that time I certainly did not argue for paying more than was necessary.

One can hardly realize how difficult it was to get capital for active business enterprises at that time. In the country farther west much higher rates were paid, which applied usually to personal loans on which a business risk was run, but it shows how different the conditions for young business men were then than now.

Speaking of borrowing at the banks reminds me of one of the most strenuous financial efforts I ever made. We had to raise the money to accept an order for a large business. It required many of hundreds of thousands of dollars—and in cash—securities would not answer.

I rounded up all of our banks in the city, and made a second journey to get the money, and kept going until I secured the necessary amount. With this, I was off on the 3 o'clock train, and closed the transaction.

When I was but 17 or 18 I was elected as a trustee in the church. It was a mission branch, and occasionally I had to hear members who belonged to the main body speak of the mission as though it were not quite so good as the big mother church. This strengthened our resolve to show them that we could paddle our own canoe.

Aids Church

Our first church was not a very grand affair, and there was a mortgage of $2000 on it which had been a dispiriting influence for years.

The holder of the mortgage had long demanded that he should be paid, but somehow even the interest was barely kept up, and the creditor finally threatened to sell us out.

As it happened, the money had been lent by a deacon in the church, but notwithstanding this fact, he felt that he should have his money, and perhaps he really needed it. Anyhow, he proposed to take such steps as were necessary to get it.

The matter came to a head one Sunday morning, when the minister announced from the pulpit that the $2000 would have to be raised, or we should lose our church building. I therefore found myself at the door of the church as the congregation came and went.

As each member came by I buttonholed him, and got him to promise to give something toward the extinguishing of that debt.

I pleaded and urged, and almost threatened. As each one promised, I put his name and the amount down in my little book, and continued to solicit from every possible subscriber.

This campaign for raising the money, which started that morning after church, lasted for several months.

But at last the $2000 was all in hand and a proud day it was when the debt was extinguished.

The begging experiences I had at that time were full of interest. I went at the task with pride rather than the reverse, and I continued it until my increasing cares and responsibilities compelled me to resign the actual working out of details to others.

(In Mr. Rockefeller's next chapter he tells of the founding of the greatest citadel in his financial empire—the Standard Oil Company.)

John D. Rockefeller, guarded by a policeman, leaves for his home after church on Sunday morning. Dime seekers, together with those who just wanted to see John D., made police protection necessary for the aged oil king even at a shrine of worship. He tells of his first church work in this chapter of his career.

CIO MOBILIZES BIG PICKET ARMY ABOUT STEEL PLANTS

U. S. May Act in Strike

Youngstown, O. May 28 (AP)—John L. Lewis' militant steel unit prepared on several fronts of the great lakes section today to tighten strike lines around three major producers who have constantly refused to sign union contracts.

Seventy-thousand were idle in the key producing centers of the far-flung major industry which employs upwards of 550,000 workers.

Mills of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. and the Inland Steel Corp. were closed. Many Republic Steel Corp. plants were shut by pickets.

But two big plants of Republic—largest of the three independent producers locked with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in its greatest test of a year-old organization drive—continued curtailed operations in South Buffalo, N. Y. and South Chicago, mills.

It was against these that Lewis' steel chieftains mobilized expanded picket resources.

U. S. MAY ACT

Hugh Thompson, organizer for Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, declared that 3000 CIO members would swell picket lines around the South Buffalo mills.

"They will form one of the biggest picket lines this part of the country has ever seen," he said.

Pickets mobilized for a fresh drive to close Republic's main Chicago area plant after police broke up two attempts to mass around company gates. Strike leaders expected reinforcements from other plants.

The whole strike area was comparatively peaceful as Federal intervention was envisioned by an authoritative source as the only chance for a quick break in strike deadlock.

Declining to be quoted by name, the source in contact with both sides pointed out that the SWOC and the three independent producers were locked in a conflict over how to proceed to negotiation of a strike settlement.

GOVERNOR SEEKS PAECE

As the biggest steel strike since 1919 moved into its second day around the plants in five states there was no immediate indication from officials that Washington would seek a quick settlement.

There was some hope that Governor Martin Davey of Ohio might set the stage for peace negotiations.

The governor revealed at Columbus that he had contacted SWOC leaders and steel executives in an effort to end the strike.

"There is good reason to believe," Davey said, "that meetings will be held by the middle of next week."

The governor warned against the commission of any "overt act" by strike participants that might create ill feeling.

In New York, where the heads of the independents attended a session of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown, said the SWOC was "demanding more than the National Labor Relations act requires."

A. F. of L. Drops Crafts Lines in Lewis Fight

Cincinnati, May 28 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor dropped strict craft union lines today in its fight against John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Federation leaders still believe workers generally should be organized into the unions of their craft, as opposed to the organization industry that Lewis advocates.

They decided informally, however, in their current conference here not to let craft lines stand in the way of increasing membership.

Peace Hope Grows In Dyers Strike

Early peace in the strike of cleansers and dyers against wholesale dye houses was seen today but picket lines were still maintained about the stores of seven chain retailers.

After a hearing before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration it was announced that the striking union and the association agreed on a closed shop and working conditions, with the only remaining grievance a question of wages and hours.

Slight outbreaks disturbed the even tenor of the strike. Strikers attempted to wreck a truck of he Holland Cleansing Company, of Broadway, Chelsea. A truck of the Valentine Cleansers of South street, Watertown, was slightly damaged when two men tore the ignition out.

Strikers charged the North Shore Cleansers and Dyers in Revere had imported 12 strike-breakers from New York.

Packers Strike Deayed in R. I.

Providence, May 29—Foiled in their attempts to tie up the meat supply industry in Rhode Island, according to claims of CIO leaders here, a strike of workers in 22 packing houses, scheduled for 6 a. m. today, has been postponed. The date of a new strike has been left in the hands of a special CIO strike committee which will open new negotiations today with the 22 houses supplying meat to Rhode Island retail stores.

Open friction between CIO officials and newspaper men occured when labor men attempted to prevent the reporters from leaving German Hall in Cranston where a mass meeting had been held.

The workers blamed the newspapers for publication of the news of today's scheduled 6 a. m. walkout in ample time to give packing houses opportunity to rush in enough meat to last through next Thursday.

The reporters were released from German Hal only after CIO officials had censored the writers' stories.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

The pride of old Jack Dunstan's life, in the days when he ran the famous restaurant known as "Jack's," at Sixth Avenue and Forty-third Street in New York, was a set of murals on the walls of two of the four rooms that comprised his establishment.

Damon Runyon

These murals told the story of "Little Red Riding Hood," and the wicked wolf. They were in big panels on the walls of the south room of the restaurant on Sixth Avenue, and of the room that had an entrance around in Forty-third Street.

Old Jack often escorted his customers about the premises explaining the tale depicted by the murals in detail. He apparently took for granted that the customers were not familiar with the yarn, and maybe, in some cases, he was right. As we remember it, his version of the story was slightly vague, but none the less exciting.

Old Jack Dunstan was a stately man with white hair and a white "mouser" or mustache, who always wore a dinner jacket in the evening, with a huge white boutonniere. He had a nervous affliction that kept his leonine head shaking slightly.

A dapper young gambler who used to hang out in "Jack's," playing practical jokes on all comers, said that the old man contracted the head shaking from saying "no." The dapper young gambler's name was Arnold Rothstein. He had a gambling house around the corner.

MR. HEMINGWAY"

You sometime heard one of Arnold Rothstein's lobbygows presenting Mr. Rothstein to a stranger as "Mr. Hemingway." This introduction was the tip-off to Mr. Rothstein that the person brought to his notice was a prospect for Mr. Rothstein's gaming establishment.

Afterwards the title "Mr. Hemingway" came into somewhat general use on Broadway as a popularity, until a real Mr. Hemingway appeared to give the name a dignity that brooked no further trifling.

We refer, of course, to Mr. Ernest Hemingway, one of our three greatest living writers. However, there was no joke about "Mr. Hemingway" in Arnold Rothstein's time, either.

There were four entrances to "Jack's," as we recall—three on Sixth avenue and one on Forty-third street. It was through the Sixth avenue entrances that the old "flying wedge" of waiters, symbolized at the hats of a burner at the cashier's desk, used to hurl the students from Harvard, Yale and Princeton, when their football celebrations passed the bounds of decorum in "Jack's."

To this day you can find on the face of the Hippodrome across the way, deep dents left by the strong, clean, manly young bodies of the students.

FLYING WEDGE

The old "flying wedge" was generally led by a then stalwart, blond gentleman named Jack Spooner, who could juggle a student in either hand while kicking goal with a third off the hip.

The last time we saw Mr. Spooner he was bowing the ladies and gentlemen in and out of Mr. Dempsey's tavern, and there was about him a manner of maturity, and also embonpoint, that caused us to express doubt that Mr. Spooner could now handle even a prep school student with any facility.

Old Jack Dunstan must have had a great appreciation of genius, for the rules of the house were always expanded to cover the unconventionalities of poets, artists, musicians, cartoonists, and working journalists.

We had a wild poet around "Jack's" in those days, who stood on well with old Jack Dunstan that if, for any reason, the poet was hurled out one of the four entrances, he could come in another, and his previous transgression was automatically expunged until he had been hurled out of all four doors.

Then he was out for the rest of the night.

BEARS TAME WILD POET

Not for worlds would we bring the blush of embarrassment to a now wholly stainless cheek by mentioning names, but that wild poet is at this time a dignified editorial columnist on the New York American, who probably will not thank us for reminding him of those doors.

But, enough of small talk. We started out with the mists that used to be in "Jack's," and what we wish to relate of those mists is that they were the work of the late Mr. Edward Simmons, whose memory has been revived by the newspaper re-discovery of his famous murals in a court room of the old criminal courts building at White and Centre streets.

It was feared that the demolition of this building would entail the destruction of the three Simmons panels on which the eyes of thousands of lawyers, jurists, and criminals have gazed down through the years, and which had been regarded as masterpieces in their kind.

Now it is thought that the panels, for which Mr. Simmons got about $5500 at the rate of $40 per square foot, can be saved.

"ATE OUT" STORY

Old Jack Dunstan always said that Mr. Simmons "ate out" the story of "Little Red Riding Hood," and that seems quite probable, as it is unlikely that old Jack would have paid the cash fee Mr. Simmons would have required for that considerable job.

It is quite probable, too, that Mr. Simmons did the work in somewhat jocose mood, and not as a matter of necessity. He was an old patron of "Jack's," along with Stanford White and other artistic notables of the day, and old-timers recall that the payment for the panels was always a subject of jest among them.

None the less, Mr. Simmons did a fine job, and old Jack Dunstan used to remark, somewhat ruefully, we thought, that the murals represented a lot of food and drink.

They were still there when prohibition closed the hottest center of night life the big town ever knew, before, or since, but now there is no vestige of them in the premises over which "Jack's" once spread. So we called up Mr. William Andrew Mackay, who used to be an associate of Mr. Simmons, and asked him if he knew what had become of the murals.

"Oh, they must have been destroyed," said Mr. Mackay. "I remember they were painted on a very thin fabric that could not have stood much wear and tear. I imagine they are like everything else about the glory that was Jack's—just a memory."

MUD AVALANCHE KILLS 500

Mexico City, May 28 (INS)—Rescuers pressed forward today in a tragic hunt for dead and injured after a veritable avalanche of slime swept over Tlalpujahua, in the state of Michoacan, covering 2000 houses.

Estimates of the dead ranged as high as 500.

Mayor Pedro Juarez, one of the survivors, said 700 persons were missing and 1000 injured in the disaster.

Mayor Juarez and 100 others were rescued from the towers of the El Monte Church, to which they had fled when the death-dealing muck rushed over the town.

The slime, released when heavy rains burst the walls of the cyanide reservoir of the French-owned Dos Estrellas Mines, inundated an area four miles in circumference.

The El Oro correspondent of the Mexico City newspaper La Prensa, telegraphed a harrowing word picture of the scene of desolation. He wrote:

"The horror of this catastrophe is indescribable. Tlalpujahua is isolated. The aspect is frightful. Nerves shiver in contemplation of it.

"Millions of tons of slime cover the town. The El Monte Church offered the only salvation. Some of the townspeople got there, but many perished trying. The waters rose halfway up the walls of the temple.

"The Church of Carmen is totally covered with slime and full of dead."

"SUFFERED SIX YEARS WITH CONSTIPATION"

"For six years I suffered with constipation, and I decided to try ALL-BRAN. I have been eating it once a day for about four years, and it has certainly done the work." Mrs. Herman Futrell, 905 W. Oak Ave., Jonesboro, Ark.

Tests prove that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is safe and effective for correcting common constipation.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, and gently exercises and cleanses the intestines. It also furnishes vitamin B to tone the intestines, and iron for the blood.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooked dishes. Three times daily in severe cases. You'll find this food far better than habit-forming pills and drugs. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

NATION HAILS AVIATION DAY

Army, Navy, Airlines Join N. E. Observance

Today, throughout the nation, Aviation Day is being observed by request of President Roosevelt.

In New England army and navy officials, along with executives of airlines and owners of private planes, joined forces to mark the day's observance.

By proclamation President Roosevelt called upon the people to undertake appropriate exercises today and directed government officials to display the flag on all federal buildings.

At East Boston airport observances will be held at the United States Army hangar and the building will be open for inspection.

DISPLAY LATEST SHIPS

Several of the latest type ships in government service will give demonstrations over the airport. As the American Airlines and the Boston & Maine Airlines hangars ships of the latest type used for commercial purposes will be displayed.

Similar observances will be held at various other airports throughout the New England states. At the Squantum Naval Base members of the navy's flying forces will hold appropriate exercises.

A statement issued in connection with the observance of today the United States bureau of air commerce announced that the 20 airlines in operation carried 76,199 passengers last month as compared with 71,449 passengers in April of last year.

LED BY NEW ENGLAND

It was through insistence of Representative Citron of Connecticut that he President set aside today as Aviation Day.

Because of this section's endeavor to lead the way in all branches of flying it was proper that a New Englander should propose this legislation. It is also proper and necessary that every New Englander interested in aviation should join in today's observance.

Aviation being so vital to our prosperity in peace and to our defense in war, should not go unrecognized, officials held. The day should also stress the need for adequate civilian aviation in commerce and the inescapable necessity for adequate military and naval aviation as an instrument of preparedness and peace, others added.

It was also urged by local, federal, state and city officials that industrial as well as public buildings display the flag throughout the day.

PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS FIRST AVIATION DAY

Washington, May 28 (US)—President Roosevelt called upon the nation to observe its first national aviation day today.

In a proclamation giving effect to a joint resolution passed by Congress setting May 28 for such an observance, the President declared:

"The people of the United States may justly claim to have taken a leading part in the development of aeronautics and to enjoy today an outstanding position among the nations of the world in the use of air transport."

Quoting the resolution calling for the observance, the proclamation added:

"Therefore, I, acting in accord with the purposes of Congress to stimulate interest in aviation with a view to the further advancement of the science of aeronautics, do hereby call upon the people of the United States to observe May 28, 1937, as National Aviation Day with appropriate exercises, and do direct government officials to display the flag on all government buildings on that day."

A nationwide radio program in which noted flets will tell of the spectacular development of aviation in the past two decades, will be a feature of the observance.

Here in Washington, prominent military, naval and civilian aviators will be guests at a banquet at which speakers will stress the necessity that the progress of aviation must be unhampered.

By direction of Colonel Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, all air lines will join in the observance.

The airports will hold open house, with the public invited to inspect them.

At the same time Colonel Gorrell will airmail letters from Chicago to President Roosevelt and to the governors of the 48 states for delivery on the same day.

In practically all the schools of the country, teachers will devote a period of the celebration.

Patrick Campbell Memorial Held

With more than 1000 pupils in attendance, memorial exercises were held at Public Latin school for the late Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of schools from 1931 to 1937.

Arthur L. Gould, who succeeded Dr. Campbell upon his death, presided at the exercises. Principal speaker was Wilfred F. Kelley, headmaster of South Boston High school.

New Aviation Test Proposed by Scientist

By G. B. LAL

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

Long Beach, N. Y., May 28 (US)—A new ear disease test, especially important for aviators, was reported here by Dr. Page Northington, New York otologist.

The test designed to measure the sense of equilibrium, or body balance, was presented by Dr. Northington as superior to the usual "rotation test," at the meeting of the American Otological Society at the Lido Club.

The commonest disease responsible for loss of the sense of equilibrium is a severe damage in the vestibule of the inner ear on one side. Diagnosis of this cannot be done in a reliable way by the usual test of whirling a person around, Dr. Northington said.

Experiments were made on the monkeys. The results applied to human beings, particularly the prospective aviators, pointed out a new test, described by Dr. Northington thus:

"The applicant for aviation, with eyes closed, stands with feet together. Stands on the foot. Walks straight line, then a circle."

His reaction then reveals the necessary facts for his inner ear condition. Certain heat and electrical current tests also supplement the walking test.

That attractive red or other artificially dyed hair might cause deafness was brought out by Dr. Marshall Taylor of Jacksonville, Fla.

Among chemical poisons and medicinal drugs that may produce deafness, Dr. Taylor listed "Aniln hair dyes, salvarsan (arsenic) tobacco, phosphorous, lead carbon monoxide and disulphide gas."

Air Bureau Drafts Drastic Rules to End Crackups

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Washington, May 28—Sweeping reorganization of air traffic regulations, giving the federal government step-by-step control over all airplane flights from take off to landing, have been drafted by air commerce officials, it was learned.

Director Fred D. Fagg declared the rules are the most drastic attempt yet made to eliminate flight-accident hazards in the commercial, military and civilian aviation field. They will be proclaimed within a few days.

Under the new setup, the flying area of the nation will be divided into 50-mile-wide airlanes, connecting 196 scheduled traffic stops. Each of these "trunk highways of the air" will operate on a stop-and-go system, suggestive of automobile highway control.

Every airplane in operation, whether commercial, private, stunt or military, will be required to carry approved two-way radio equipment.

All pilots operating at night or during bad weather must be fully qualified for "blind flying."

The time is not far off, Fagg said, when all flying will be done entirely by instruments. Such supervision would mean disqualification of a big majority of the 14,000 persons holding private licenses, it was believed.

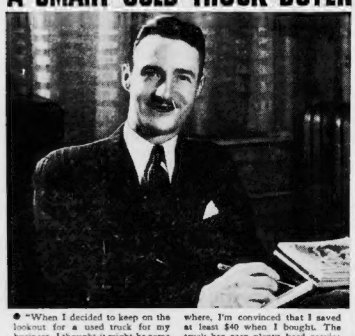
A SMART USED TRUCK BUYER



● "When I decided to keep on the lookout for a used truck for my business, I thought it might be some little time before I'd find one that would suit me," says Clarence DeWitt, moving contractor. "But checking at a Dodge dealer's I was surprised to find an unusually wide stock of fine used trucks to pick from.

"The salesman explained that due to the record-breaking sales of new Dodge trucks they were being constantly supplied with fine trade-ins. And that every one was priced below the market value for a quick turnover. I had no trouble finding just the truck I had in mind. And after checking up on prices elsewhere, I'm convinced that I saved at least $40 when I bought. The truck has been plenty hard service since then, yet has caused me practically no expense for repairs or replacements. Anyone, I'm convinced, who wants a bargain in a used truck —or a used car, for that matter— can't do better than to go to a Dodge dealer."

LUCK SMILES ON MANY IN N. E. IN IRISH SWEEPSTAKE DRAW

ten holding tickets on starting horses were Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Finn of Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain; Mrs. Nellie Gillon of Walnut street, Lynn; Anna R. Sheehan of Lancaster avenue, Revere, "Up Connaught" of Waltham street, South End, and W. H. Capron and Company of Needham.

LOOK FOR LYNN COUPLE

The other Massachusetts residents holding tickets on starting horses were the Cape Cod resident and "Felix" of Leland road, Whitinsville.

Scores of New Englanders who drew non-starting horses will get $2233.

The Lynn couple were Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Gillon of Walnut street who had signed their ticket "Bobby" after one of their grandchildren.

Mrs. Gillon, 55, is an invalid and unable to walk, having suffered a shock six years ago. Her husband, a retired dentist, is a World War veteran.

"I don't know what we'll do with the money," she said today. "If we get a lot of it, we'll travel to better our health. About a week ago I was given a four leaf clover and I had it planted. That brought us luck, I guess."

MARRIED 51 YEARS

Finn is 71 years old, while his wife, Mary, is 73—accounting for the 5th as plume on the ticket of "Mary and Martin." They will celebrate their 51st wedding anniversary next month.

Smiling happily, his wife at his side, Finn told a Boston Evening American reporter that today's drawing of his ticket was the third piece of good luck in his whole life.

"The first good luck," he said, "was when I married my wife, Mary. The second was when I won a baby doll at a church carnival a couple of years ago. Never before have I won anything like this.

"I will not make any plans to spend the money until I get it.

Alton E. Chase, 54, the Cape Cod lucky ticket seizer, his hopes based on the favorite "Cash Box," is a landscape gardener at the Hotel Belmont at West Harwich.

Reached by telephone by the Boston Evening American and informed of his good fortune, Chase let his wife do the talking.

"This ticket was the first we ever bought," she said. "My husband bought it in March. I also had purchased a ticket.

"How do w feel? Well, it makes us a little nervous and very happy.

Three Rhode Island persons, all partners with a ticket on a favorite horse, "Perifox," who signed the ticket "We Three," were identified as Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hanson of Warwick and Mrs. Ebba Jansan of Providence. All are employed at the Swedish Institute in Providence and the address of this place was listed on the ticket.

Mrs. Jansan explained to a Boston Evening American reporter that neither of them had purchased the ticket. But three months ago when she and Mrs. Hanson were in New York, the latter's brother-in-law gave her a ticket as a gift.

W. H. Capron of Needham, who drew a starting horse, "Gainsborough Lass," had apparently purchased the ticket without telling his wife.

For when a reporter called at the Capron home, Mrs. Capron said she knew nothing about a sweepstakes ticket and added that her husband was in town, shopping.

Twenty-five mourners attached to the Reservoir carbarn at Cleveland Circle were holders of one ticket that will pay $2233, because it is for a non-starting horse.

Another ticket on a non-starting horse, bearing the nom de plume of "Peg, George, Kate and B," was identified as belonging mostly to the family of Mr. and Mrs. George McKay of Butler street, Dorchester.

"Peg" is for a child, Margaret, eight; George is a six-year-old son, and "Kate" is another daughter, four years old. The parents said "B." was a "friend of the family."

"CANDY KID" WINNER

Another ticket worth $2233, signed "Leila and Another," was believed tobe owned by Mrs. Alice P. Walton, a Works Progress Administration worker on a writing project, living at 9 Claremont park, South End, the address on the ticket.

Another such ticket, signed "The Candy Kid," is believed by Mrs. Della T. Delosh, living at 207 Cummins highway, Roslindale, to be that of her son, Francis T. Delosh, 29, a traveling salesman now in Pittsfield, or to her daughter, Miss Beatrice Delosh, 24, a teacher in a Dorchester private school.

When a reporter called at 5 Hale street, Worcester, seeking the identity of "Joe," written on a ticket worth $2233, he was told there was no "Joe" living in that house.

$150,000 Windfall Hinges on Derby Result

The sum of $150,000 will look pretty good to Mr and Mrs. Martin J. Finn of 174 Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain. Under the names of "Mary and Martin" they bought an Irish Sweeps ticket. In the draw they were fortunate enough to pick a horse, Frank Hals. If Frank Hals gets down there in front at the English Derby next week, the Finn couple will win the big prize.

FORD MEN HERE IN PLEA TO U. S.

A delegation of 10 employes of the Ford Motor Company assembling plant a Somerville, claiming they represented approximately 100 workers they said were discharged there last night, sought the protection of the Wagner-Connery Act today in an appeal to the National Labor Relations Board.

The motor workers were closeted early today with H. Howard Myers, regional director of the Labor Relations Board in New England, and Sam Sandberg, New England district organizer of the United Automobile Workers of America, C. I. O. affiliate, at the labor board offices in the Federal Building.

They were discharged, the workers claim, because of activities in the automobile workers union, through which John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain, is seeking to bring about organization of all employes in Ford plants throughout the country.

Protesting that their discharge was in violation of the clause of the Wagner act guaranteeing workers right to collective bargaining and union organization, the representatives of the Somerville plant workers asked the labor board to intereede with plant officials.

Workers discharged yesterday have been employed at the Somerville plant from eight to 25 years, and 80 per cent of them have never been fired before, the union representatives claimed.

Milk Firms Seek Marketing Row

The Massachusetts Milk Control Board today announced that next Tuesday negotiations will be renewed for establishment of a milk marketing agreement for the Boston area.

Al Smith 'Stopped'

WORDS FAIL HIM AT CATACOMBS

Rome, May 28 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith belied his own reputation as a maker of pungent phrases today and admitted that for the first time in his life he was at a loss for words.

The former governor of New York, commenting on his visit to the catacombs of Rome on his first trip to Europe, declared:

"Words fail me—for the first time in my life.

"What can you say about them except they are one of the most impressive sights in the world?"

Smith exchanged his customary brown derby for a soft felt hat of the same color to tour the subterranean maze, but his inevitable cigar was tilted at a happy angle.

"Thus far, my trip has been glorious," he said.

"Nothing has happened to mar my pleasure."

Even the sirocco or hot, humid wind from the African desert which has been depressing Rome for several weeks has had no effect on the former governor except to cause him frequently to remove his derby and wipe perspiration from his forehead.

Smith expected to be given an audience with Premier Mussolini but he said no date had been set.

"I'm looking forward to that," he commented.

Helen Jacobs Bows In Paris Net Play

Paris, May 28 (AP)—Helen Jacobs' quest of the women's singles crown of the French hard court tennis championships once more came to grief today. The Berkeley, Cal., girl was eliminated in the quarter-finals by Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, hard-hitting Polish star, 6—3, 6—4.

GASOLINE TAX DIVERSION IS HELD LEGAL

Power for dispersing state funds rests solely with the legislature and cannot be curtailed by an amendment to the constitution, the state supreme court today ruled in an opinion to the legislature.

The opinion disposes of a controversy that has raged since funds from the gasoline tax receipts were diverted for general fund requirements during the administration of Governor Joseph B. Ely.

Steps to amend the constitution had been started this year through the initiative and referendum. The court held tax diversion is beyond the scope of the initiative and referendum.

FLEA FAULTY

In another opinion, the court advised the Legislature another initiative opinion being sought for a constitutional change to place a $25 per $1000 limit on real estate taxes is faulty because of an inaccurate and misleading title.

It had previously been supposed that the form of the petition had been approved by Attorney General Dever, contrary to fact.

In explaining the opinion on gasoline tax diversion, Senator Joseph E. Cotton of Lexington, Republican floor leader, said it in no way restricts the power of the Legislature to disperse the gas tax fund. It means the court is of the opinion the proposed amendment to restrict that power cannot be taken to the people on an initiative petition.

A move for diversion of the gasoline tax to keep down the state tax, now before the Legislature, struck a snag today over the amount that will be authorized transferred. The dispute has sent plans for prorogation by tonight glimmering.

HURLEY CUTS DEFICIT

The governor first asked for a diversion of $7,300,000. Later he cut the amount in his supplementary budget to $6,150,000.

Ways and means committee recommended that the unexpended balance of the state highway fund, or gas tax fund, be diverted in increased handouts to the counties, cities and towns for state-aided road work under Chapters 90 and 81. Some estimates are that when the balance is struck, the diversion will be reduced to about $5,000,000, which would give the Governor a state tax of $14,000,000 instead of the final figure of $13,000,000 that he asks to be set.

Arguments are being made that most of the cities and towns have already made their commitments for the year and have set their local tax rates. Increases in amounts to be distributed to the communities, it is argued, would be so much velvet and liable to be spent without benefit of taxpayers.

Banker Out of Danger

Baker Recovering After Operation

Aboard Cutter Taney in Mid-Pacific, May 28 (AP)—George F. Baker, one of the world's wealthiest men, was reported out of immediate danger today after a virtual floating hospital reached the New York banker's yatch in mid-Pacific.

Dr. D. J. Zaugg of the United States Public Health Service boarded the yacht Viking after a race to bring emergency aid to Baker, during which the cutter Taney was outfitted with hospital equipment.

Dr. Zaugg reported no immediate blood transfusion was necessary to save the 79-year-old banker from peritonitis.

He said no attempt would be made to transfer the chairman of the First National Bank of New York from his yacht to the cutter.

Dr. Zaugg will remain aboard the yacht during her 270-mile dash to Honolulu. The cutter will convey the yacht to port.

Searchlights from the Viking led the Taney to the yacht's side early this morning. Dr. Zaugg and his medical supplies were lowered to a small boat and five minutes later he was at Baker's bedside aboard the yacht.

DR. ADLER DIES IN SCOTLAND

Dr. Alfred Adler, 67, famed Viennese psychologist and well known in Boston through his many appearances here on the lecture platform, died today in an ambulance while en route to a hospital at Aberdeen, Scotland, according to word received here.

Dr. Adler, who had been lecturing at Aberdeen University, collapsed in the street apparently of a heart attack.

His daughter, Dr. Alexandra Adler, a research fellow at Harvard University, was notified of his death.

The Viennese professor was a long time associate of Dr. Sigmund Freud and was associated with the latter in the development of many of his behavioristic theories.

An annual speaker at Ford Hall Forum, Dr. Adler appeared there last December 20. During the questioning period, in answer to a query, Dr. Adler roundly defended the actions of the Duke of Windsor and scored the critics of the former English King.

HATCHET PAIR FACE 30 YEARS

Jersey City, N. J., May 28—Gladys MacKnight, 17, and Donald Wightman, 18, "flaming youth" killers today faced maximum terms of 30 years in prison. Judge Thomas Money will pronounce the sentence next week.

Convicted by a jury of the hatchet murder in the second degree of the girl's mother, the couple were white with fear as the jury foreman pronounced the words on which their fate rested.

Gladys stood motionless but her red-ringing former sweetheart bowed his head and sobbed. Donald's mother, Mrs. Joseph Wightman, standing only a few feet away, collapsed.

As he was being led away to his cell Donald turned fiercely toward the girl and fairly screamed:

"You made a murderer out of me."

The jury of middle aged family men was out only three hours before reaching a verdict.

Each defendant had charged the other with wielding the hatchet.

Man Gets $8100 for Injury to Left Eye

An award of $8100 for injury to his left eye was won today by William Bodkin of 15 Winter street, East Cambridge, in his suit against the New York Central Railroad before Judge George C. Sweeney and a federal court jury.

Bodkin testified that a piece of steel struck him in the eye as he pounded company rails with a sledge in Cambridge, in April, 1936.

Master Gets Plea Against Race Dogs

Two bills in equity, seeking a restraining order against housing 40 racing dogs near a Lynn schoolhouse, today were ordered sent to a master for hearing by Judge Harold P. Williams in Suffolk superior court.

Judge Williams designated Peter Lawton, Newburyport attorney, as master.

Fine 2 for Attack On Harvard Boys

Two Boston men were fined $25 each in East Cambridge court today, after being found guilty of assault and battery on Edward A. Counihan, 3rd, son of Judge Edward A. Counihan, Jr., and Henry M. Fuller, both Harvard law students.

According to the students, the men, Anthony Leoni, 20, Vine avenue, Roxbury and Louis DiBiasi, 25, Chambers street, Boston, attacked them on May 13 near Harvard square.

MAINE WATERS LURE 'FLYING' FISHERMEN

Fishing by air!

That's a new one.

Yet that's just the story a group of enterprising Boston business men are making—men who have to sit in offices during the week, and can't very easily get to the far northern sporting waters of Maine in time to get in a few days' fishing, and still be back at the office on Monday.

So they're going to fly. Up to the Rangeley lakes in far northern Maine, where four waters, Rangeley lake, Mooselookmeguntic lake, Kennebago stream and Dodge pond, afford excellent salmon, squaretail and rainbow fishing.

* * *

This fish plane—the first in New England's history as a co-operative venture—will leave the East Boston airport Friday, June 11, and be at Rangeley within two hours, landing on a new field recently constructed there.

Fifteen minutes, and the anxious anglers will be at the Dodge Pond Camps, ready to cast a sweet-running line out where the silver-sided salmon is waiting.

* * *

Two full days of fishing, Saturday and Sunday, then back to Boston Sunday night. A twin-motored Stinson plane, capable of carrying ten passengers. Or two or three Stinson planes, from the regular Boston & Maine airfleet, if reservations warrant.

That's certainly pioneering New England's great sport of inland fishing!

* * *

Salt water Ike Waltons won't be lagging, either.

News of the heavy early-season run of striped bass at Plymouth is drawing many anglers there this week-end, with others visiting the more seasoned waters of Buzzard's Bay and Buttermilk Bay, on the other side of the Cape.

* * *

Fishermen report particularly good luck in Plymouth Bay, at the mouth of the Eel river. One baitcaster took 35 stripers last Sunday; another, a youth who fished from the bank with waders, took six bass without using a boat.

Regulation equipment is nickel-plated spinner, with seaworms, or smelt.

In Buttermilk Bay, Jack Roberts, a native of Buzzard's Bay region, took an 18½-pound striper.

* * *

Which indicates, says Carl G. Bates, chief game warden of the state, how much can be done bringing back the stripers to the harbors, the salmon to the rivers of the state.

Propagation and re-stocking alewives and smelt in the streams and rivers of the coastline has brought back to a large extent the bass and bluefish so plentiful in colonial days in the Commonwealth.

* * *

Reports of salmon caught in the streams of Massachusetts in recent months indicate that the game sea-fish could be induced to spawn again in large quantities in the rivers here, if pollution were cleaned up, and the streams re-stocked with feeders—as alewives and smelt.

A large fresh-run salmon was reported taken recently far up the Merrimack river. Another drawback is the number of dams and seawalls placed across the rivers, without allowing runways for the fish.

* * *

Bruce Adams, Bromfield street, Boston, artist, who commutes from Manomet, reports a sculpin in one of the rivers near Plymouth Bay, that leaped out at him while fishing recently. The docile sculpin kept its head out of water, body under, watching him fish for a quarter-hour, Adams says.

Another fish story—bah!

* * *

Guy Gannett, Maine newspaper publisher, will fly by special plane to join the airplane fish party, June 11, at Rangeley.

* * *

One of Boston's veteran fishermen, Dr. Frederick J. Cotton, noted surgeon, will go to Damariscotta soon for his annual foray on the Chinook.

* * *

Dr. R. G. Vance of Wahan made a sensational run of 58 straight shooting at the skeet shoot at the Massachusetts Fish and Game Club ground, Norfolk, this week. Ellis Hunt of Newton broke his first 25 straight. He is a newcomer to the championship contenders.

R. A. Fletcher took high-gun Saturday with 46 out of 50. Fred Hill, Arlington, took high handicap with 41. Dr. Vance took high gun again Sunday with 48; K. Brown, Sr., of Wellesley, high-handicap, with 52.

* * *

A. Y. Atwell, Boston, recently took biggest fish for the week at Averill, Vt., with a lake trout 11½ pounds. His party of four took 54 lake trout and salmon, none under three pounds, during a week's fishing.

* * *

Arrivals at Averill from Massachusetts included Dr. E. A. Codman, Beacon street, Boston; Walter B. Jenkins and Clarence Dodge, Worcester; Fred B. Korbel and C. F. Reynolds, Springfield.

A. J. Stevens and A. B. Cote, West Springfield; C. F. Mosher and J. L. Hyland, Turner's Falls, and Frank B. Cummings, Harvard.

* * *

G. I. Gibbons, Boston, took best salmon this week at the Tabusintac, in New Brunswick, with a 16½ pounder.

The party there this week, including Allie Sisson, Providence; Dr. James L. Chute, Osterville; Dr. Edward F. Gleason, Hyannis; J. H. Chipman, Gibbons and A. M. Jones, Boston, took 41. The run of sea trout is about due, they report.

* * *

Scores at the western Massachusetts Skeet Shoot Championship last Sunday at Westfield:

Won by Dick Shaughnessy, Dedham, with a 97. Dick took 49 running, after missing his first.

SPRINT STAR. Arthur Lindegren swam the long course to set a new 200-meter free-style record. "It took plugging to pull down that record," says Art. "One reason why I smoke Camels is they give me a generous 'lift' in energy when I'm tired after swimming. There's a world of fine flavor in Camels."

MARGARET HUTTON—free-style and back-stroke champion and famous for her record-breaking performances as a plunger—has smoked Camels since 1935.

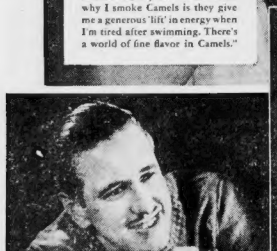
JANE FAUNTZ MANSKE started smoking Camels 2 years ago. This Chicago girl's superb diving form won her National and Olympic honors.

JOSEPHINE McKIM—holds records in both sprint and distance free-style events. Camels have been her favorite cigarette for 3 years now.

GEORGIA COLEMAN—made Olympic history in her spectacular spring-board diving victory in 1932. She became a Camel smoker that same year.

LENORE KIGHT WINGARD—the foremost woman free-style swimmer—holds 7 world's records, 16 national ones. Camels have been her cigarette for 4 years.

DOROTHY POYNTON HILL—petite, blonde Los Angeles beauty—the incomparable Queen of the 10-foot platform dive—became a Camel fan over a year ago.



OLYMPIC STAR. Arthur Highland blazed his way to aquatic fame by smashing records in the dash and middle-distance events. Arthur says: "I find that smoking Camels with my meals and afterwards eases the strain after racing and helps my digestion roll along smoothly."

PERFECT CONTROL helped Marshall Wayne, high diver, to win the Olympic diving crown! "Healthy nerves are a diver's mainstay," explains Marshall. "Mine are healthy and I intend to keep them healthy. I never hesitate to enjoy a Camel wherever and whenever I want. Camels don't get on my nerves—they're mild!"

WHAT THESE ACE MERMAIDS SAY—Dorothy Poynton Hill speaking: "I'm always in training with good condition in mind. Camel is my cigarette. I prefer Camels for their mildness. They never jangle my nerves. I can enjoy smoking as often as I wish. I think that another advantage of smoking Camels is the invigorating 'lift' in energy that they give me when I'm tired after a strenuous workout."

Lenore Kight Wingard—one of the greatest, yet most modest, American woman athletes of our times—adds this: "I really get fun out of swimming. Hard work is part of the game and I enjoy that too. It's grand the way Camels help me enjoy my food no matter how tired or strained I may be. Oh! Another thing! Being in the water so much is hard on the throat, but even under those trying conditions I've found Camels do not irritate my throat."

Do You Have to Study at Harvard?

ANN MARSTERS FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW

Freddie Bartholomew, young film star, plans with Ann Marsters, Boston girl reporter, his educational future. He thinks he'd like Harvard, because of the spring rials, particularly if he wouldn't have to do much studying. He says he isn't overly fond of study, unless, of course, he could learn to be a good jockey in that manner. They are going over the situation in Freddie's dressing room at the MGM studios.

New York was splendid. Does one have to study much at Harvard?"

"Some do and some don't."

"Then I won't, he said quickly. "I hate to study."

"You can have your studying done for you," I said.

"Really?" said Freddie, with his eyes shining. "How?"

"Well, if you don't study, you can always go to one of the tutoring schools in Harvard square, just before examinations, and pay them for cramming a sufficient amount of knowledge into your head. They pride themselves on that you'll pass your exams, and if you don't, some of the schools give you back your money."

Jockey Ambition

"That sounds fine," said Freddie. "It wouldn't be so bad, going to college, if no one MADE you study."

"Do you plan to major in anything special at college?" I asked.

"Probable English," he said, "because I want to be a writer—although I'm interested in his fors just now. But what I really want to be is a jockey."

"Then why don't you be a jockey?"

"Oh, I don't know [illegible]

[illegible]

But it's difficult to know how it will turn out," he said, very seriously. "You see, I might start to grow up, or suddenly, and probably in a year or so I'll be at the in-between age. Then I'll have to leave the movies. Perhaps, when I'm older and have finished college, I'll go back to acting, again.

Polo Alluring

"I suppose I'll be ready for college in about three years. Then a chance that I may go back to England, and if I do, I'll go to Oxford or Cambridge instead of Harvard. I have a catalogue of Princeton too. That's where my tutor wants me to go. He says it's much better than Harvard.

"How does he know?"

"Um," said Freddie, "he went to Princeton. But everybody else says I should go to Harvard. Tell me—do they have any horses there?"

"Oh, yes, and they have a pretty good polo team."

"That would be fine," said Freddie. "I like to ride and I'm just learning a little about polo. Say, I'd like to see some pictures of Harvard. The catalogue didn't have any pictures in it. And I'd like to see how the students look."

I [illegible]

"That's strange," he said. "In England the students dress very smartly. But personally, I don't care much for clothes—it's being comfortable that matters. But why do they wear old clothes at Harvard?"

Buttons Vital

"Oh, there IS a reason," I said, "only the inmates know it—so perhaps you'll find out some day. But remember, if you go to Harvard, DON'T go armed with a new wardrobe designed for the smart college student. Just take about an old thing—and it would be best to find out just how many buttons Harvard is wearing on its coats. I forget whether it's the one button roll or the two button roll—but anyway, it's terribly important!

"And if you want to be a true Harvard man (cops calls of 'out take up crew' you'll have to have your head shaved until it looks somewhat like a thistle."

Freddie giggled. "That would be all right," he said. "I should say it would be very comfortable."

"There are quite a list of them," I told him, "like the Harvard Crimson, the Lampoon and the Chronicle. The editors of these publications read [illegible] very faithfully."

Loves Adventure

"I haven't done very much scenes with, as I said I told him. But I've acted in a few silent pure stories because that's the kind of stories I like to read.

I suppose college will teach me a lot about how to be a writer—but if I had my way, I wouldn't bother going to any college at all. I'd stay in California and buy a lot of horses."

(Tomorrow — Eddie Cantor gives some rules for success in an interview with Miss Marsters.)

"Well," I told him, "quite a few of the buildings are located in a section of Cambridge called the Harvard Yard. Others are near the banks of a river called the Charles. That's where the boys go rowing. Do you think you'd like to do any rowing at college?"

Freddie scouted. "No!" he said. "I don't think I'd be very much interested in that. However, I MIGHT like it. Has Harvard a good football team?"

All you have to do is to write an essay of [illegible] more than 2,000 words on WHAT PARIS MEANS TO ME.

That simple enough, isn't it? Well, there's more to it. Now read the rest of the rules carefully.

All contestants must be residents of New England or students attending a New England school or college. They must be 18 years of age or over.

If the judges select a winner under 21 years of age, his or her parents or guardian must give written consent before the trip can be taken.

The deadline for all essays is JUNE 22, 1937. All essays must be submitted before midnight of that date.

All essays must be addressed to the Paris Essay Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

No essays will be returned after the decisions have been made by an impartial board of judges.

Miss Siddons Mason are conducting the contest in view of the enormous reception New England has given the MGM picture "Captains Courageous," its premiere [illegible] showing at the Colonial theater in Boston.

STORY OF PICTURE

The picture, adapted from Rudyard Kipling's famous story of the same title, deals with the fortunes of Harvey Cheyne, Jr., the only child of a spoiled rich man, being cast overboard from a transatlantic liner by unexpected throws into the [illegible] company of a Gloucester fishing boat's crew. No longer a pampered youngster, he learns to make his way in the world.

In the cast are Freddie Bartholomew, Lionel Barrymore and Spencer Tracy. It's a picture you'll love, remember.

But getting back to the contest. The two winners will reach Paris when that city is at the height of its celebration in connection with the 1937 Paris International Exposition.

It is an exposition of beauty and wonder at every turn. Winners of the contest, who will pass as they will leave Paris not later than September 15, 1937, will be guests of the American and the movie producers. Hometown Gals Make Good:

You may have read in brief news dispatches about a young woman named Dorothy Entwhistle Swenson, and perhaps you have heard of the startling and artistic performances of a swan dance by a Miss Helene at the Cocoanut Grove . . . Items describing the ascent of Miss Swenson to the vice-presidency of one of New York's leading department stores did not identify her as a native of Everett.

GEORGE HOLLAND

Nor does it seem to be known generally that Miss Helene is the winsome, young Helen O'Shea of the South End, whose Broadway career as a feature dancer came a temporary cropper when Flo Ziegfeld passed on to the Valhalla of good show men . . . But the accomplishments of these Greater Boston girls who chose so widely different field of work are [illegible] with interesting highlights . . . Miss Swenson worked in the information and personal service department of one of Boston's great stores . . . Then she transferred to the advertising division, and it was as advertising manager that she made her business debut in the New York field . . . The strange feature of her success in business is that rather than being the stern business-woman type, she has pink cheeks, blue eyes and golden brown hair, and is young and slender . . . or maybe that isn't a "strange" feature at all, at all . . .

* * *

About Miss Helene (nee O'Shea) . . . the boys and gals around town are praising her as the possessor of the form divine . . . Ziegfeld had plans for Miss O'Shea . . . if the great producer had survived, the Boston girl would perhaps have been by now in Hollywood . . . A highlight of Miss O'Shea's career which has not hitherto seen print is that she had the foresight to copyright the unusual contolutions which feature her performance . . . how this was managed is quite a mystery . . . copyrighting a dance is a new wrinkle to this column . . . But Sally Rand preferred not to face a suit brought by Miss O'Shea, in which she charged infringement of copyright . . . the rich, young Miss Rand settled out of court . . .

Once Over Lightly:

Ann Corio took a nasty spill while horseback riding in Toronto . . . She says that she explained to the horse that she couldn't afford to be bruised, as it might interfere with her livelihood . . . And they are supposed to have gotten along all right thereafter . . . With Boston's Old Howard, one of the few remaining landmarks in the burlesque business, many of the stars are looking about a bit . . . The beauteous Ann is negotiating for an engagement in summer stock . . .

Billy Steele has been a triple threat along the nightclub circuit for several seasons . . . Tall, dark and handsome, the picture scouts have been lukewarm in their appraisals because the singing, piano-playing, smart-talking Mr. Steele has hardly as much hair as Carl ("Goldilocks") Moore, the Boston radio comic . . . Steele played last week at the Mayfair, to the pleasure of the patrons . . . In midweek things began to happen . . . His agent in New York telephoned him that he was booked for the Metropolitan Theater in Boston, as of next Thursday . . . and an hour later the Paramount offices informed him that a recent movie test was regarded so highly that a trip to the coast had been booked for him . . . The Mayfair management released Steele from his contract Wednesday in order that he might talk things over in New York . . .

Nicks, Nacks -No Nocks:

[illegible] and incidentally, has okayed a test of Evelyn Oakes, [illegible] with Nye Mayhew's band at the Statler . . . Ann Barnes Kelly, Brookline model, will be given a test by the [illegible] next week . . . Jack Werby, youngest agent in [illegible] . . . Royal Blue will be prescribed [illegible] for gym suits to be worn by A-1 girls in Boston . . . [illegible] for physical education . . . At present [illegible] brown or any shade of blue . . . Roxbury Memorial [illegible] Werby, will enter Penn next fall . . . He was a football candidate, too . . .

One of the most famous Broadway playboys is reported to have engaged the services of a Boston detective agency to locate a former pal friend whose first name is Yetta . . . the Broadwayite was married to one of the most glamorous stars of the screen.

Rumor V—e, who objects to his name being used in [illegible] public prints, has returned from the Coronation . . . Or are you guessing? . . . Boston's South Station Theater has the largest seating capacity of any newsreel theater in the country, although New York's new Grand Central Theater was described as the largest . . . An alleged $10,000 "mistake" in settling for some real estate on a neighboring river city may go to the D. A. this week, [illegible] doesn't, it will be made a political issue in the impending campaign . . .

Family Life Is Vividly Portrayed

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hollywood's recent switch from super-spectacles and the eternal boy-girl formula to pictures about everyday people who tick, even as you and I, is as unexpected as it is tremendously encouraging.

In this latest and utterly pleasing reincarnation, Hollywood has given us recently "A Star Is Born" and "Captains Courageous," and now comes "Make Way for Tomorrow," bittersweet love story of an old couple who lived too long.

"Make Way for Tomorrow," which opened at the Paramount and Fenway theaters yesterday, is the bitter, heartbreaking and quietly beautiful story of a family much like the family next door or across the street. Only the family next door would recognize you and yours in it, for none of us would believe himself capable of such thoughtless cruelties. It is an true to life it hurts, and yet Leo McCarey has given it such compassionate direction and the performances are so outstandingly sincere and restrained that there is not one favorite role in the entire splendid production.

* * *

Victor Moore and Beulah Bondi, those grand Broadway favorites as Mr. and Mrs. Cooper of Jasper, Lawrence & The Years Are So Long," the movie film which Vina Delmar adapted her thoughtful, brilliant script. The old couple have been married for 50 years and, no longer able to support themselves, are compelled to seek aid from their children.

The "children's" solution is that their aged parents, for the first time in their lives, are to be separated one is taken in by a daughter, the other by a son in a distant city. From the first instant in their new surroundings, the squalky, little old lady and the white-haired frail old man realize that [illegible] are unwanted.

George Cooper • bridge playing [illegible] the girl won in and the latter's good granddaughter, Rhoda, complains that she can't invite her young friends to the house any more because "Granny bores them with her endless babble about the past."

In his son's home out West the old man is equally miserable. He has married his daughter-in-law's enmity by trying to [illegible] but [illegible] of her life is not what it should be.

One of the most telling sequences in the picture is during an evening of bridge at George and Anita's home, with Anita acting as instructor. Old Mrs. Cooper insists on being present because "it wouldn't look well if I didn't put in an appearance." She chats with this one and that one and a painful lonesomeness is apparent on the part of the annoyed bridge addicts. The old lady's fatal crime is to rock her chair right over the floor's squeaking boards until the others are driven to distraction, she smilingly unconscious that she is creating a nuisance.

* * *

It is a beautiful pit fall picture entirely minus the organ-stops, which, of course, is the reason for its power. Not one of the characters is all white nor all black. Each has his faults, whether he be a member of the younger or the older generation, and the fact that they are unconscious unintentional is what makes "Make Way for Tomorrow" the more tragic and human.

Victor Moore and Beulah Bondi are magnificent in roles that might have been easily caricatured by overplaying. Fay Bainter, as the bridge-playing daughter-in-law, does some of her best work on the screen. Thomas Mitchell, as her husband, and the old people's son, is so bluntly unaware of the tragedy happening before his eyes that he brings the character to life. Barbara Read, one of the "Three Smart Girls," is even smarter in the current featured role, pointing up the role of the wayward younger generation still. Another excellent characterization is Maurice Moscovitch, as the kind, philosophic friend.

Arthur Treacher is the gentleman's gentleman of "Step Lively, Jeeves!" companion pictures based on P. G. Wodehouse's famous brain-child. With the assistance of Alan Dinehart and George Givot, a pair of swindlers, he provides all the laughs you're led to expect and more.

At Uptown

"Wake Up and Live," starring Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Jack Haley and Alice Faye, comes to the Uptown today for the week, and to the Bowdoin Square tomorrow for a four-day engagement.

Ways, Means To Slim Figure

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features, Syndicate, Inc.)

WAYS and means of getting slim depend upon the way you took to curves. If overeating caused the excess weight, diet to cure it.

If you have extremely low fuel requirements, you must choose low-calorie foods. Lazy bones need exercise to bring the weight down. Then, too, there is the remote possibility that your glands may be out of kilter.

In spite of glands and ancestors, overeating is the primary cause of overweight. Even though the average energy requirement of women is 2200 calories per day, it is difficult not to overeat, for most of the calories come in the best foods.

When you stop to consider that you can get 1500 calories in one bridge luncheon and 400 calories in a modest afternoon tea, you can understand how quickly you can put on an extra ten pounds. Or, supposing you take just 150 calories a day, one and one half pats of butter or one and one-half pieces of candy—over the amount you use.

Even so slight an excess would cause a gain of one-fourth pound a week. This fraction of a pound sounds insignificant, but it is twelve pounds a year. If overeating is the cause of your embonpoint, dieting is the remedy.

Fundamentally all excess weight is visible evidence of stored calories. However, not all overweights are large eaters. There are people whose fuel requirements are so low that they are unable to eat normal amounts of food without calorie storage. As a rule, fat small people are big eaters, in the class

Don't take her drives with the much older man too seriously.

No doubt, as you're both in college, you have read in your English class how it happened that Othello made such a fool with Desdemona.

He said, "She loves me for the dangers I had passed, and I loved her that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have used."

Don't let your pride stand in the way of making up with this girl. Anything with wheels is witchcraft, even if it is but a humble school bus. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR Miss FAIRFAX:

As a constant reader of your column, I am impressed with the number of very young girls who write to you and who seem to think, if they don't get what they want before they're 20, life will be dust, cinders and ashes.

May I say, through your column, that my own youth was wretchedly unhappy. I married young, and my marriage was a tragedy.

But at 50 I am very happy. Most of the things I yearned for in my youth have come to me. I have my own little home. My son is my best friend. His children are devoted to "Granny."

I have traveled a good deal, and I have an interesting circle of friends.

And please let me say, if the gods don't shower down all their blessings in early youth, they may in middle age. WOMAN OF FIFTY.

DEAR FRIEND:

Please let me thank you very heartily for writing to this column.

I am glad to have a witness to the fact that the middle years hold real contentment and happiness.

What seems tragic to sweet 16 often seems high comedy to its elders who have learned the true value of living. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR Miss FAIRFAX:

One day I was reading the paper, and I saw that my sweetheart married someone else. I still love him. Mother doesn't want me to have any serious affairs till I'm better. I've been ill for a long time. But I'm very lonesome.

And then I met another man, who comes every Monday to collect, mother's insurance. He asked me if I would go with him, and then I happened to find out he is married, too.

He tries to make love to me when he comes to collect, and tells me he loves me, but it's hard to believe such a story. I'm 17. E. K.

DEAR CHILD:

I agree with your mother, my dear E. K. that you'd better turn your attention to a complete recovery of health before considering any love affairs. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Brown Linen for Summer in Town

BROWN LINEN with much crisp white vies even with the velvety beauty of pansies blooming in the Public Garden . . . think of its complete domination of mahogany desks and shining typewriters! For its chic and coolness are suggested for the business girl's summer wardrobe.

It's not exactly a workaday number, but for the girl who wants one summery costume in which to impress her chic and personality on the world of big business. Later in the week we will show some grand budget selections for good, stiff, day-in-day-out wear. This is the "extra special" type of crush-resistant linen, costs somewhere around twenty dollars, and, for that matter, can "take it," too. The magnificent part of it all is that the striking flange of white pique may be buttoned for laundering!

The white straw hat is one of the new deeper-crowned effects, with a wide band and a debonair swerve of brim. Miss Louise Ranney models this Fashion Congress selection.

CHAPTER 20

Even Edward couldn't quite understand how she felt about everything. He didn't know how she felt about being there on charity, and how his mother opposed every single thing she tried to do to help, or improve things.

She didn't even tell him about the curtains she bought for their room. If we have to live in it, she thought, I can at least make it a little more attractive. She bought the lamp first, because she happened to see it—such a pretty white pottery base, with a white shade lined in rose. Bee raved about it, and Mrs. Wilson looked at it, and said nothing. But she said enough about the curtains!

Marie bought pink organdie ones, with ruffles. She knew they'd flatter the room, and make it more inviting, and they matched the pink and white bedspread which was quite new. She could hardly wait to get the ugly green ones down, and the new ones up. They made a bulky package, but she carried them home just the same.

DISPLEASURE

She was so proud of them.

Mrs. Wilson looked at them, her lips pressed tight together. "Did you want to put them up?" she asked.

"Why, yes! In our room! The bed spread is pink, you know, and I thought these pink curtains . . . My room at home was pink—"

Mrs. Wilson's lips compressed again. She opened her mouth, shut it tight, said nothing.

"Are you displeased about something, Mrs. Wilson? Don't you like my curtains?"

"Oh! I'm sure it doesn't matter whether I do or not. You're the one to be pleased, not I. If you'd rather have cheap pink stuff that will fall to pieces the first washing, throwing your money away when we don't know where the next . . . but it's your money of course."

"I . . . I kind of hate to see those green ones come down, that's all. They're the most expensive silk net. The fringe alone on them cost over so much. I had them in the front room, but the summer we went camping—that was the year Papa was sick—and we rented our house, the tenants left the shades up and they just rotted after that.

"All I could do was cut them off short and use them in the sleeping porch. I always liked them. I've always been partial to green. Green is Eddie's favorite color, too. He never liked pink, even as a baby he didn't like it. But if you like it, go ahead. Don't mind me!"

I won't! I never heard of anything so silly. And Edward DOES like pink! I'll put them up anyway, Marie thought rebelliously.

But she didn't. She put them away in the trunk, without even showing them to Edward. There was no use. Things would have to go on just as they were as long as she lived in her mother-in-law's house.

It was April now. Over two months since she came.

KIND NEIGHBORS

The Werners no longer ... at all but ... had ... They were ... good ... Mal Werner ... pal ... whenever they saw Marie on the street or ... in front of the house, and she nodded and smiled in return, trying to act as if she were used to being called Mrs. Wilson.

The people on the other side, elderly Mr. and Mrs. Gertz, and their two old maid daughters, were very friendly, too. The younger one, Dottie, often walked to the branch library with Marie, and sometimes they went to a movie—Dutch treat—at Dottie's invitation.

Dottie, broad of hip, narrow of shoulder, enormously fat, in spite of her dream, old face and graying hair, was mad about movies. She collected autographs, knew every movie actor and actress' history, who married who, how old they were, who had babies, who was contemplating divorce. She was hopelessly romantic.

Her hungry interest in brides and weddings and other fairy love lives disconcerted Marie, frightened her, but not as it frightened Bee.

To Bee, poor Dottie was the horrible example, the living proof of what happens to you if you don't marry. If it had not been ... and ... and ... Mama" and "Papa" into the car, taking them for rides ... to shows with them on vacations with them, lost in the elderly world they lived in, and ... never to be relieved in spite of poor Dottie's awkward ... her eager friendliness, Bee might not have been so desperate about getting things settled with Kendrick.

Rubella loved her. He'd told her time and time again that he cared for ... But he was ... he came to the point. Said what for him ... was a ... proposal ... live at home, like Eddie and Marie, if worst came to worst. Things couldn't go on this way any longer—he couldn't stand it.

To Marie one said, "Men never really propose to girls any more, especially when the girl has a job, too, and is making almost as much as they are. Men and their pride—! Oh, I could scream sometimes! They don't pay much in banks, but it's a secure position, and, I don't mind going on working.

"But Ritchie is so stubborn—he'll never really ask me until he makes more than I do, and sometimes I think that he's just waiting . . . waiting me in an something . . . but what girl wants to? There's always the chance—"

Silence. Uneasy silence from Marie.

Whenever Bee talked this way she wondered if she guessed, if she could possibly know that she'd really proposed to Edward, the night they parted by the ...

The ... was ... I ... don't know. It's hard to say ... but of course you know what you ought to do."

"... FURNLESS FUN"

... last was a direct quotation from Julie. But Marie, who ... seldom knew what she ought to do, couldn't really expect another to know.

Nevertheless it answered her.

Diphtheria Is on Wane Due to Protective Program

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOT so long ago I told you how the danger of diphtheria has been greatly reduced by the early vaccination or immunization of children.

Commissioners of health in widely-separated cities agree that there has been a definite decrease in the number of deaths due to this disease.

For example in New York city there were only 37 deaths of diphtheria in 1936. In 1915, when 68 deaths there was a marked decrease from former years.

These results ... an amazing achievement. But we must not assume that all dangers ... and that diphtheria ... definitely been conquered.

The effort of public health authorities to give the protective "toxoid" or "toxo-anti-toxin" to the youngsters before they enter school is the immediate problem.

But it is important to make a further vaccination after a few years. This is due ... by means of the "Schick test," which ... whether or not the child ... susceptible to diphtheria ... the protective ... continues.

SIMPLE PROCEDURE

This is a simple procedure, causing little pain or discomfort. It determines ... you ... possess the necessary protection against the disease. It is usually applied six months after the last of the protective inoculations.

If the Schick test is "positive," it means that the child should receive a new series of inoculations. Unfortunately, many parents are ... Too often they fail to have these tests made six months after the last vaccination and ... appearances never ... them.

Dicky laid a kindly reassuring hand upon his shoulder.

"How about it?" he asked. "Will you be ready for lunch by ... or will you ... be looking at the dogs?"

"Oh-h!" He came ecstatically back to realization. "Can I eat? Just watch me and see!"

"All right! We'll [illegible] then," Dicky said [illegible] the switch key. And how along we did, to such advantage that we arrived at the dogs' corral before even Junior had time to get impatient.

Father and son, Frank DiStasio and Anthony DiStasio of Revere, must die in the electric chair. The father was convicted of murder in first degree. Today the Supreme Court upheld conviction of the son as an accessory in the same death, that of Daniel Crowley, West End man, in 1935.

VAN DEVANTER SEAT QUERY

Washington, May 28 (INS)—The question of whether Supreme Court Justice Van Devanter's retirement creates a vacancy was raised today by Senator Borah (R) of Idaho.

Borah declared there were legal authorities who felt the recently enacted retirement law was unconstitutional, because it changed the status of a supreme court justice, a constitutional office, without constitutional authority to do so. His views were taken [illegible] in behalf [illegible] Senator Lewis (D) [illegible] of Illinois.

FEDERAL BANK SUITS ORDERED REOPENED

In a lengthy opinion, Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster today granted the motion of counsel for the closed Federal National Bank of Boston to reopen the [illegible] equity actions [illegible] by four suits [illegible] banks [illegible] which a motion to [illegible] was denied [illegible] December.

The closed trust banks [illegible] First Company, the Inman Trust Company, Continental Bancorp Trust Company of Worcester and the Lawrence Trust Company, are seeking to recover approximately $200,000 alleged to [illegible] from their funds while under control of the Federal National and loaned to various persons.

Returning the report to Arthur Brock master Judge Brewster today requested that specific information be given as to how proceeds of a number of loans were disposed of, including the following:

Loans allegedly made to Daniel C. Mullowney president of the closed Federal National of $50,000 on December 17, 1929 and $10,000 on May 19, 1931 from the Bowdoin Trust Co. $[illegible] from the Inman Trust Co. on December 27, 1929 and $40,000 allegedly loaned to John A. Dwyer, former president of the Salem Trust Co. to the Bancroft Trust Co. on July 10, 1931.

Judge Brewster specified in his opinion:

"I allow this motion with the understanding that it carries no obligation on the master to reopen the hearing to take testimony unless requested to do so by either of the parties within a reasonable time."

Roosevelt Vetoes Extension of War 'Term' Policies

Washington, May 28 (INS)—As written, the government must keep faith with the several hundreds of veterans who have contracted their war risk insurance and are keeping up the payments President Roosevelt today vetoed a bill which would have extended for another five years the privilege of converting such policies into peacetime policies.

Mr. Roosevelt advised congress that enactment of the proposed legislation would constitute a breach of faith on the part of the federal government toward the 1,092,000 holders of converted policy holders contributing to the government's treasury since the bill was first passed in 1917.

"1. The small group of term insurance policy holders would continue to carry their life insurance at considerable lower premium rates than the great majority of converted policy holders are allowed, and,

"2. The reserves which have been built up almost entirely by the converted policy holders would continue to be drawn off to meet undue losses sustained in carrying the low premium term policies."

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

I can't keep from thinking about Mr. Roose[illegible] regulating hours and wages, [illegible] but not entirely disingenuous attempt to smuggle back the old discredited NRA, as something a bit analogous to the ancient legend about Medea sowing the dragon's teeth and raising an unexpected and perhaps undesirable crop.

The advantages of a generally shortened work week and work day are not as obvious as may appear on the surface. So long as we remain a capitalist economy, however, modified from above, the law of supply and demand must still hold [illegible] acts working out.

[illegible] of course, are all for shorter [illegible] week. Theoretically the [illegible] would seem to imply [illegible]. Theoretically a minimum [illegible] workers from exploitation.

Cites Evils as Applied To Small Business

A paragraph which I ran across from the [illegible] seems to me to state admirably [illegible] such laws as applied not to [illegible] of other but small businesses and even [illegible].

"Suppose a government—state government if not federal government—undertook to say that a domestic servant should work no more than 40 hours a week for no less than $16 a week. What happens? The employer might be an idealistic professor entirely sympathetic with the New Deal's general objectives. But if he were making $3000 a year, would it be certain that his wife could, or would, keep her servant girl?

Would it not be likely that the servant girl would be dismissed and that the household would make shift with occasional help. Thus there would be the gravest danger that in the attempts to apply fixed rules and hours for an entire continent by Washington's fiat the new classes the President seeks to serve will be condemned in increasing numbers to lives of idleness and meagre relief."

Of course the President knows nothing [illegible] of the middle class. Nor [illegible] of tiny businesses.

There [illegible] would not be much objection [illegible] by congressional enactment [illegible] interstate commerce sale of [illegible] child labor conditions. The [illegible] ership in many an industry compared with the proposed [illegible] the social workers are [illegible] Massachusetts and New [illegible] trend down could a more [illegible] would seem to be reasonable [illegible] with the threatened [illegible].

May Be Difficult To Produce at All

Economically it is probably wrong to expect [illegible] will be greatly helped by [illegible] work day and work week as [illegible] as the proposed bill [illegible].

But [illegible] is not going to help [illegible] and a matter of hours and [illegible] difficult to produce at all. [illegible] increasing tendency to idleness [illegible] to be considered work[illegible] in a direction, now already [illegible] working at all but existence [illegible].

The [illegible] support and support is already becoming almost as much of a national nuisance as the "right to a job" preached by the CIO workers.

The other day a Georgia judge uttered a platitude and [illegible] comment that deserves circulation. It has to do with getting people off the relief rolls and into jobs. I suspect it will take some such drastic action as he suggests to get [illegible] of relief and onto even a five-hour day and forty-hour week position.

"It would seem that the relief measures adopted by the Federal Government some four years ago have given rise to some unwholesome conditions.

"It is apparent that many grown-ups are as easily spoiled as children, and when once so spoiled are much harder to cure. Idleness is a crime against society and those who voluntarily remain idle impose upon and are a menace to society.

"A person who is able to work, can produce work and has no visible means of support, although relief funds are supplied him, is a vagrant under our law and should be indicted as such."

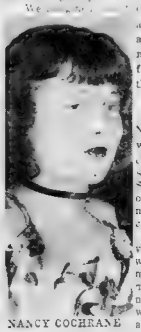
Burroughs Newsboy Foundation Benefit Held at Pops

By BETTY ALDEN

LIFE IS GETTING more and more complex for the automobile owner . . . Tagless tagging is bad enough every time we pull our humble vehicle into a curbstone to park, we are besieged by a [illegible] offering to "shine it up, Lady? . . . or else" . . .

We [illegible] owners of luxurious limousines, which are constantly polished by chauffeurs to a glitter which rivals the upper set of a model in a toothpaste ad, would be free from similar annoyances and could ride the highways in unmolested dignity . . .

But last evening at the Pops Concert for the benefit of the Burroughs Newsboys Foundation, Nancy Cochrane went the shine boys one better and combed right into the backs of limousines as they pulled up to the curb at Symphony Hall, in her zeal to sell copies of the Blast . . . the small humorous newspaper which was the official publication of the concert . . .



NANCY COCHRANE

Of course, most of the cars she invaded belonged to friends of her parents, who forgave her high pressure salesmanship because they realized that modern merchandising methods were needed to sell the Blast . . . for the paper was just half the size and cost 50 times as much as Ye Old Boston Evening American . . . and Everett socialites know their values . . .

The store value [illegible] of a copy of the Blast carried with it a chance on a house trailer, which helped to break down the sales resistance and add considerably to the amount raised for the newsboys summer camp, Agassiz Village . . .

Nancy's costume for paper peddling consisted of rough blue [illegible] in which to carry her cigarette case and [illegible] collected from each sale . . . her shirt was a plaid affair of yellow and black and she was comfortably shod in socks and sneakers . . . "Tuffie" Crocker, head of the girls [illegible] wore dungarees . . . carried her costume with a bright green [illegible] . . . CHAMBERLAIN TAKES OVER BALDWIN POST

London, May 28 (INS)—Neville Chamberlain became British prime minister today as Stanley Baldwin, in characteristically unobtrusive fashion, bowed himself out of office.

King George conferred an earldom upon the retiring prime minister and the order of Dame of the Grand Cross upon Mrs. Baldwin.

A succinct announcement of the cabinet he served as chancellor of the exchequer, Chamberlain attained an eminence that neither his famous father, Joseph Chamberlain, nor half brother, the late Sir Austen Chamberlain ever reached.

MATTER OF MINUTES

After Baldwin had received the resignations of himself and his cabinet by King George Chamberlain went to Buckingham Palace 10 minutes later. Baldwin left and accepted the premiership. Five minutes after his arrival he performed His Majesty he would submit his cabinet list later.

When he left the palace Baldwin carried with him a gift from King George and Queen Elizabeth, a silver-framed photograph of their majesties.

Baldwin, relinquishing his post as head of the state at the height of his popularity.

The man who guided Britain's ship safely through the crisis of King Edward VIII's abdication went to Buckingham palace at 9:20 a.m. to tender the resignation of himself and his cabinet to King George VI.

AUSTEN LAKE

T. O. M. Sopwith Keeps Faith With Dead King

CREDIT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL YACHT races for the America's Cup this summer belongs to a man whose remains today lie in Windsor Chapel—the late George V of England. For it was the father of England's present monarch who smoothed T. O. M. Sopwith's ruffled feathers in 1934, after he had towed his million dollar toy, Endeavour I, home and sprayed the press on both sides of the Atlantic with columns of outrage.

AUSTEN LAKE

American yacht racing was just a commercialized big business, he had said. The sporting qualities of U. S. yachtsmen were at unlovely levels, he said. He would never race for the America's Cup again. Pooie to all that!

Then suddenly he did an about face. He dropped tactful little quotations to the British press praising the U. S. people for their fairness, admitting that his tactics off Newport were all wrong and that America yacht methods were pre-eminent in the world. And presently he placed an order for another Endeavour and after a short spell challenged again.

What had happened to change his viewpoint was that George V himself a boat lover and sportsman of undoubted quality, had invited Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith to Buckingham and said in effect

"See here, there is something of bigger international significance than tooling a couple of heavyweight yachts around the waters off Newport.

"These sour blurts, however justified, are having a bad effect on international amity. And amity is what England needs most of in Europe's clouded condition. So make a fair puss out of it, my lad, and do it over again."

The late King did not, of course, say it in that argot, but [illegible] the same substance. So that Sopwith, as [illegible] his gripe and did it over again. Which [illegible] having their patrician [illegible] that two pick masts stepped for [illegible] Cup. And why, too, there will be no [illegible] at the British sloop's forepeak this [illegible] Rainbow or the Ranger, whichever U. [illegible] the grade, scuttles the challenger. Sopwith's [illegible] knighthood from George VI.

Lipton Did It For Tea

COMMERCIAL GOODWILL AND ADVERTISING were [illegible] of Sir Thomas Lipton when he sailed successive [illegible] upwards of ten millions in the hope [illegible] which no pawn broker would [illegible]

[illegible] Tom charged the expense of his costly cockle[illegible] to the advertising budgets of his [illegible] by saying to his stockholders' squawks by saying [illegible] reputation and the tons of priceless pub[illegible] free by the press of the world was worth quadruple the expense and had made his Pekoe most popular in the world.

But there was always much doubt in the minds of his investors that the tea-buying world associated the amber brew with racing yachts and suggested that, at least, he should paint the company's slogan on the acres of billowing white sail which the Shamrocks carried. But the old parlor salt indulged his yen for yachting up to the day he died and continued to send the bill to his stockholders.

When Sir Thomas passed, big yacht racing went back to its socially supercilious beginnings and lost much of its popular appeal.

It is hard to imbue the non-sailing public with the spirit of a syndicate which pays a million dollars for mechanical perfections, hires crews of competent Scandinavian tars and a professional sailing master and goes off beyond the horizon to stage the races.

THE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN IS persisting in the [illegible] that Max Schmeling is going to fight Jimmy Braddock on the night of June 3 in the Long Island Bowl.

Latest devices, as a prelude to a later law suit against Braddock et al, is the circulation of large, multicolored posters bearing the faces of Max and James with the announcement of the fight. Crews of billboard men have tacked up these posters on fences in New York.

Then, knowing the answer beforehand, New York's Boxing Commission has dispatched a telegram to Braddock's camp, where he is training to meet Louis, reading:

"You are directed to be in New York five days before June 3 to complete training. You are also directed to advise this commission as to the place in this state you intend to train for the contest in question."

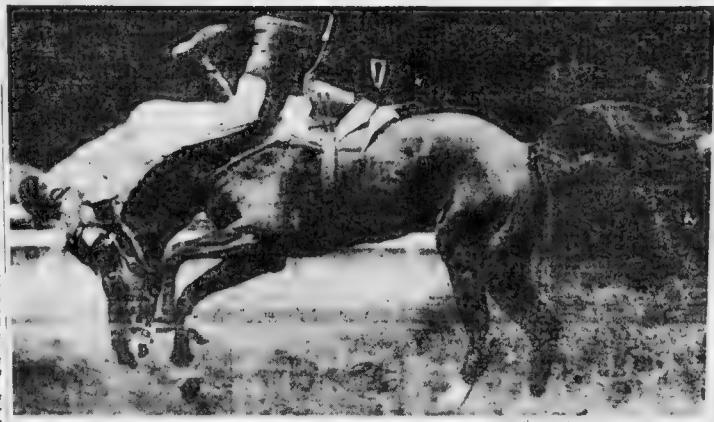
This serves to illustrate the foolish formalities of commercial law. Instead of [illegible] the simple strength of a violated contract and asking damages which are perfectly apparent, the Garden and Schmeling [illegible] a serious of ludicrous pantomime, complete to faking [illegible] and surprises when Braddock fails to show up at ringside.

The Garden's lawyers, one hears, intends to use this mockery to [illegible] suit. Their argument will be that the Garden's loss for Braddock's failure to fulfill his fight contract with Schmeling should [illegible] more than the value of the tickets sold, and on which the Garden was forced to refund the purchase price.

Meanwhile, following June 3, the Garden intends to start a series of [illegible] and summons in Chicago to upset Braddock, while the New York Boxing Commission, in its self-supposed futile omnipotence will declare the title vacant and Schmeling as the No. 1 challenger.

Food For Dean's Thought

THE ACCIDENTAL BEANING OF MICKEY COCHRANE and his serious condition with a fractured skull should cause Dizzy Dean to take moral stock and realize that ban ball throwing is no mere mischievous prank. In throwing at the heads of the New York Giants last week Dizzy might have injured a Giant player fatally. Now is the time for the major leagues to enforce the anti-bean ball rule, which its umpires have ignored . . . When Walter Okeson yields his dictatorship over college football officials next fall, Wilmer Crowell or A. W. Palmer, both Philadelphians, will be leading candidates for his place . . . Complaint of the major leagues over the previous method of selecting players for its All-Star games has been that it was more a popularity contest among the fans than representative of the strength of the leagues. New system, announced by Judge Landis, will have the 16 team managers choose the teams.



HEADIN' HOME, but not the right way. Jockey Campbell aboard Navarin in a Belmont Park steeplechase took a "header" downwards when his mount stumbled and fell over one of the 12 difficult jumps on the tricky New York course.

UP AND OVER the first hazard in perfect unison are three jumpers in the Belle Bryn Mawr steeplechase at Belmont Park. Amagansett (No. 4), proved a bit too sturdy for the others and finished home in front.

BEST BET—CANPRA, 6TH RACE

Suffolk Downs, May 28—Canpra, a stout finisher and an excellent soft track performer, appears to stand head and shoulders over six indifferent rivals in the mile and three-sixteenths of the eighth stanza here today.

Canpra came from far back to finish a fast second to Ross in a fast mile and a furlong race . . . Narragansett Park . . . back. Stone . . . Skipper, Hour . . . him back . . .

SIXTH—El Puma, Hinterdon, Passeck Way

Just have to give EL PUMA one more chance. This platter was heavily backed in better company . . . better form today. HINDO . . . do no better than finish a distant third to Holluschicke and Gilbert Fleish under weird handling. Mayhap apprentice G. Napier will ride . . . better form tomorrow. HUNTERDOR was barely nosed out by . . . Ruffy in his last start. He figures . . . EASIEST WAY turned in a surprising performance to . . . down Cynwyd Redress and others only a few days back. Will be troublesome if he still retains that . . .

SEVENTH—Houch's, Khay, Erb

TOUCHE was away slowly in his last race but closed like a "wild horse" to win, going away from Company, Khay and others. The distance of that race was six furlongs. The additional two furlongs of today's number should prove right to measure. KHAY was beaten only one and one-half lengths by the top selection in the above mentioned race. With a weight shift of five pounds in his favor, the local coorbearer may prove real troublesome. ERB for . . .

EIGHTH—Canpra, Hoursend, Steelhead

CANPRA will probably have HOURSEND to down for major honors. The latter is strictly a . . . rider, and recent performances . . . dew track should be totally disregarded. STEELHEAD worked a mile in 1:42.3 in preparation for . . . race. That move suggests a very improved performance.

Agawam Handicap Features Opening Day Card There

Springfield, May 28—Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's Beefsteak and Steve Panarella's Bubblesome have been assigned top weight of 121 pounds for the Agawam handicap, six furlongs feature of the opening day at Agawam Park, and now the meeting which will start at 2:15 tomorrow afternoon is official.

There is always a good deal of advance chatter about a race meeting.

Each and every arrival at the track is faithfully reported; the grass on the infield is always pictured in words, and there is always a great deal of conversation dealing with the drunk-beat-off hoofs. But it isn't official until the racing secretary hails off and tells the world which horses have been nominated and how many pounds he will lug.

The nominations and weights as announced by Racing Secretary "Ty" Shea, are Bubblesome and Beefsteak, 121; Mrs. W. H. Dedhams Little Azzo, 114; W. E. Johnson's Master Lad, 113; Mrs. F. Rossiter's Marston, 112, "T. K. Sweet's Vote Getter, 108; Mrs. L. Laura's Eldne, 107; Mrs. R. McIlvain's Likewise, 106, Miss M. Dioguardi's Dunhill, 106; F. Brewton's Maxine F., 105, and John S. Anderson's Dark Revue, 101.

Bubblesome comes off a winning effort at Gansett when he whirled six panels in 1:13, and Beefsteak, seven-year-old chestnut gelding, also ranks high in the book of Racing Secretary Shea. He sag among the nominations for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap a year ago.

Little Argo has been running over horses this spring in Maryland where he won four races; Master Lad is the five-year-old chestnut gelding which slapped his heels in the genteel face of Anerold here last Fourth of July; and Marston, with 112 pounds, could take all the marbles.

The feature would seem to be a wide-open affair, and it is expected that, of the 14 nominees, at least eight will be made to the post.

The track record for the distance, 1:11, was set by Ladfield on the day the track opened two years back, and it may be installed or beaten tomorrow, as the same track starts out on the finest season it has ever enjoyed.

On the eve of the opening the barns are parked practices to the number of 200, with heavy shipments from Belmont Park and from the Middle West still in arrears.

The totalisator board was given its final workout. Jack Stevens, famous WTIC sports announcer, who will call the races, tested the public address system and found it to his liking; the Waite gate is set up in place for the start of the first race, a five furlongs sprint for two-year-olds; the camera eye is squinting down at the finish line, and the racing strip has been nursed and petted and pampered until it is slick and fast.

There will be an eight-race card tomorrow, starting at 2:15, with the daily double decided on the first two races.

Only ten horses will be allowed to start in the first two, and no more than a dozen in the others, with the exception of the Agawam Handicap.

With fair weather promised, a record turnout is expected.

Through the bewildering Beckshares and over the Mohawk Trail, they will come in cars and buses by the thousands from New York State and Vermont and New Hampshire, and over ribbons of roads, added thousands are expected from Worcester County.

Selden Signs Billy Neal To Ride His Thoroughbreds

By TRACKMAN

A former rider himself, Roy Selden, the Californian, should know a thing or two, when it comes to signing and riding those bangtails . . .

It is interesting to note that after arriving here with a large string of thoroughbreds, headed by the veteran Appetizer, he signed Billy Neal to be the hosting.

Neal is the leading rider in the country in the matter of wins, but up to date he has been able to win only one heat during the young New England season.

It seemed that the young lad was beset by bad luck and just couldn't get any live mounts. But the stable proved to have been holden with the youngster's stellar performances in bringing Paul Jolly Outrush to the winner's circle the other day at Suffolk.

Today the guidance of this same Selden, Neal should blossom out as one of the top notchers in these parts. At Santa Anita during the winter Billy Neal completely graced the winner's circle and his services were in high demand.

The combination of Neal and Selden should earn their share of purses at the current season at Suffolk Downs before the racing clan moves on to Rockingham.

Danny Shea, the local horseman, will introduce a local boy to the Suffolk patrons this afternoon. He is Danny Driscoll of Salem. The lad will be astride Shea's Clean Sport . . . Tom Mc-Ivy, Rockingham's president, taking in the races at Suffolk . . . Mrs. F. J. Shea, the Newton socialite, added another likely juvenile to her promising string when she purchased Stage Beauty for $3000 from Cary T. Grayson.

R. W. Collins has arrived from Narragansett with his equipage string . . . Agent Monte Pake has taken over the books of apprentice Freddy Schell and also will manage the engagements for the Veteran Tommy Luther . . . Carrol Bierman loses his bug June 12 . . . Jockey Egross checked in from Aurora and will live here for the remainder of the season . . . Mrs. J. Silverman part owner of the Parasophie is a visitor at Suffolk. Her stable is headed by the two-year-old Bold Turk.

McCoy, Smith Visit Suffolk | 'Rock' Prettied For Race Meet

By JACK CONWAY

I MET TOM McCoy, boss of Rockingham Park, strolling arm and arm with Lou Smith through the paddock at Suffolk Downs.

Mr. Boston

"I have a new system for trying to get winners," said McCoy. "I first ask Lou what horses he likes, and then I can safely exclude them from the money After that I try to pick a winner from the remaining horses.

"Last year at Rockingham Park, I used to bet on Lou's selections, and I lost my share of the track's profit."

Smith laughed good naturedly.

"That's what makes racing," said Smith: "Nobody can beat the races, but we all get a kick out of trying to do so."

Tom Thorp came over and greeted McCoy and Smith. Tom is steward at Rockingham Park as well as at Suffolk Downs and Narragansett Park.

"I understand you have flossed up Rockingham a bit, Tom," said Thorp.

"We have painted the grandstand and put some extra paint on the clubhouse," replied McCoy. "The track is in excellent condition.

"I plan to live near Salem, N. H., during the Rockingham meeting," said McCoy. "I consider New Hampshire a vacation land, and I feel good while up there even when Lou gives me losers."

Jim Munroe will once more be racing secretary at Rockingham. He has held this post since Lou Smith first brought legalized racing to New England.

"We shall have plenty of horses at Rockingham," Munroe told me. "Hundreds of horsemen now remain in New England for our entire racing season.

"Many of the horses now at Suffolk Downs will be shipped to Rockingham when this meeting closes. They will later return to Suffolk Downs and then go on down to Narragansett.

"We have ample entries for our stake races at Rockingham. I think you will witness some good racing at the Salem, N. H., strip."

Frank Menke, director of publicity at Rockingham, has s . . . most of the week at Suffolk Downs where he has been trying to pick a few winners for himself while he has done a ballyhoo s . . . with the turf writers.

Makes One Wonder Why More Batters Aren't 'Beaned'

This photo-diagram gives one an idea of how it is possible for a batter to be "beaned" by a pitched ball. Traveling a distance of 60 feet, six inches at the rate of a mile in 25 seconds, the ball takes less than half a second to speed from the pitcher's hand to the plate. Catcher as well as batter must think with lightning rapidity to receive the ball. Small wonder Mickey Cochrane lost track of the ball for the fraction of a second that cost him a fractured skull. A batter's reflexes must be sharp to avoid a ball thrown at him.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nation-wide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Gliders, hand-launched stick models and R. O. G. cabin models will comb, soar and dive above Bicycle Park in Waltham tomorrow morning as Junior Birdmen compete in the last of a series of three to place high in each of the three events, an upset in the scoring will occur.

All of the contestants are expected to participate in the New England classic at Franklin Field next month. A bugbear or more of the Waltham model builders will be on hand, as well as the Junior Birdmen from Worcester, Reading and other cities.

Plans are under way to make the championship tournament the most important and successful of any similar meet on record in this section of the country and no model builder should miss the opportunity to compete.

To enter all they need do is write a postal or letter to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, requesting a free manual. This will be sent by return mail and will contain entry blanks, specifications of the models' list of prizes and other information.

It is highly necessary for every contestant to file his entry blank as soon as possible in order to receive a series of bulletins which will be distributed soon. These bulletins will keep contestants informed of the progress of arrangements and technical details. They will supplement the news of the contest being given in this column daily and in the feature section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

• • •

Every Junior Birdman and Birdwoman as well as every adult friend of aviation will be interested in a special article to appear in the Junior Birdman section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser on Sunday. It was written by Lawrence Shaw, national director of the Junior Birdmen of America.

"It will open the eyes of model builders and receive the rich praise of parents of Junior Birdmen and all persons identified with the aviation industry.

Don't miss this special article in this Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

Following a tour of airports in New York, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, Allan T. Schott of 16 Poplar street, Providence, R. I., will visit Boston wing headquarters of the Junior Birdmen.

His letter announcing the coming visit included a report of a plane trip over water in which he spotted the Endeavor I, T. O. M. Sopwith's American Cup challenger, navigating under one sail.

Allan is an enthusiastic Junior Birdman and is always glad to help Rhode Island squadrons get started on an active aviation career.

Misdirected Spending
SEEN AS POSSIBLE BASIS
Of All Depressions

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

[illegible] is one which comes up rather frequently. [illegible] is [illegible] a danger of over-expanding [illegible] capital goods industries." If [illegible] Government [illegible]

[illegible] that day came the announcement that [illegible] construction of a huge new [illegible] plan after Mr. Roosevelt has expressed the [illegible] capital goods industries" are going ahead too [illegible]

[illegible] men are discussing the subject, [illegible]

[illegible] closely related to one that has long divided [illegible] namely, do business depressions result from over-production or from underconsumption?

[illegible] have held that the trouble comes from [illegible] spending, which cause undue confidence [illegible] purpose to control the saving and investment [illegible] people, which would lead to state Socialism. [illegible] advocate inflation as a means of [illegible] purchasing power.

Probably it is this sort of thinker who is now most concerned about [illegible] something to check capital goods expansion.

[illegible] thinking, because I have never been [illegible] over-saving or general over-investment. [illegible] people lacked purchasing power. [illegible] just before the crash that [illegible] people, which would lead to state Socialism. Others merely

Amoskeag PLANT SPACE Leased

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The rehabilitation of former Amoskeag Manufacturing plants is as stirring and dramatic a story as one may find in modern industrial history. And new chapters are constantly being written.

The latest of these tells of the leasing of space to the Stephens Spinning Co., which brings the number of new industries housed in the once greatest textile plant to 13.

The achievements of the people of Manchester in staving off what many considered industrial disaster when the Amoskeag collapsed forever are deserving of praise threaded only with superlatives. Their determination to carry on was not limited to a desire to exist alone; it encompassed an iron resolve to prosper. It is hardly any wonder that the business and financial interests of all New England laid the news of each new industrial arrival, and look forward to the day when the entire plant will be under lease and full employment exceeds the 4000 persons it is expected the present 13 occupants will require in the coming six months.

* * *

Analysts of industrial trends are turning up some extremely interesting facts these quiet week-ends. And, in the belief that investors and traders are missing them because of too much concentration on the long-term or important near-term market movements. The farm equipment industry, for instance, is in a position to enjoy a continuation of the tremendous sales expansion in evidence since 1932. It is estimated that deferred replacement demand alone has a volume of between $750,000,000 and $1,000,000,000. In itself enough to assure a long stretch of prosperity. And with only one factor in about five using mechanical power, the field for new equipment is enormous. Likewise, the industry reveal a 30 per cent gain in the first quarter of this year and promise the full period will result in the smashing of all previous records.

* * *

From a technical standpoint farm implement stocks have resisted the declines of recent months in excellent fashion. Certainly hedged near their highs for the bull market they are deserving of attention on the first move to new high ground. We favor International Harvester, Case and Deere.

* * *

The rails continue to cause observers the most concern. Recent heaviness developing out of dissatisfaction over April operating figures. Actually the drop-off now news has discouraged those who bought into the group a few weeks back. As of last night's close the Dow-Jones average literally had its back to the wall. A further slide carrying it a full point under the low of April 28 would undoubtedly bring out offerings. If these show in volume we feel that the index will probably decline to the 49-31 area and individuals could be carried off to 180-165.

* * *

The above is not to be looked on as an expectation. Rather is it an advance. It may or might happen in the event of further weakness. And it is only proper that it be recognized here. Insofar as its long term significance is concerned, if it does happen, it will probably be nothing more than part and parcel of the development of the next intermediate rally base.

Notebook: Robert Gair, now up for board listing, is expected to earn as much as $2.50 per share this year . . . And will probably initiate common dividends shortly . . . Curtiss Wright full year earnings are expected to be about what less than the $1.50 shown on the "A" stock in 1936 . . . All of which does not argue against near term upswing of major proportions . . . McKesson & Robbins may show over one dollar a share in the first half . . . And could do better in the last six months . . . Improvement is said to be largely concentrated in the drug manufacturing division and not in the liquor department as some have said . . .

STOCKS In Narrow RANGE

TRADING DULL

New York, May 28—The stock market settled into a narrow and dull trading range today, after chalking up gains of a point or so in early dealings, with steel shares setting the upward pace.

Approach of a three-holiday in observance of Memorial Day restricted turnover.

U. S. Steel rose over a point to above par. Bethlehem and Republic did nearly as well closely followed by Otis and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Rail shares were led upward by Chesapeake & Ohio, which spurted more than 2 points. Atchison ran up half as much, while N. Y. Central, Great Northern preferred and Baltimore & Ohio each chalked up fair-sized fractional gains.

Tractions were independently weak, reflecting the Interborough contract with the CIO, increasing annual wage costs $2,500,000. U. S. Rubber and U. S. Industrial Alcohol T. preferred dropped 3 points.

Coppers, rubbers and utilities showed moderate improvement. Aviations were paced by Douglas Aircraft on a jump of 2 points.

Bonds moved irregularly higher, governments displaying a firm tone. Corn lost early gains, as other grains weakened. Cotton was little changed.

TIMELY FACTORS

Word from the retail trade front was mildly encouraging, brokers said today. Leading centers reported an upturn in sales from 2 to 5 per cent over the previous week and a gain of from about 10 to 20 per cent over the like week last year, Dun & Bradstreet said.

Labor disputes and other factors tended to retard turnover in some respects, however, it was noted.

Reassuring to financial circles, it was said, was the disclosure in the weekly condition statement that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York again continued buying U. S. Government securities from the open market.

Since it helped to bolster federal issues on the spring break, the bank has now been out of the market about a month, banking circles observed.

The French franc opened down 20% of a cent at 4.66¾ cents, and the pound sterling was off ⅛ of a cent at 34.94 3-16.

Old Colony R. R. Allowed More Time

The United States District Court allowed the Old Colony Railroad reorganization plan committee until August 1 to submit a reorganization plan under Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act. The date was originally set for June 1.

The court also granted permission to the New Haven Railroad to purchase six new electric passenger locomotives. The New Haven was allowed to pay $6345 interest due Dec. 1, 1936, on Dutchess County Railroad 4½ first mortgage bonds, and $168.50 on Maine Central 5s, 1937, on Providence Terminal Co. at 4 per cent, first mortgage bonds.

Comments of Brokers

A renewal of weakness in bonds or commodities, however, would be reason for greater caution on the part of traders and investors. J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

The underlying position of the market may be said to have been somewhat improved as a result of the current period of irregularity and hesitation, thus enhancing the prospects for a successful outcome of the next effort to absorb offerings which proved a barrier to higher prices earlier in May. J. E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

The outlook is for a highly selective market, without much increase in activity, especially during the time when much of the market's attention is centered on labor troubles in the steel industry. J. H. Richardson, Southgate & Co.

Believe it would be premature to jump to the conclusion that the reaction is all over. Prefer to allow a little more time for the rails to regain their composure and for new upward leadership to show itself. H. B. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Unless real weakness appears in the rails or in bond prices, there seems little point in being concerned over trading commitments. —G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.

It would appear that continued irregularity might prevail, with the steel strike and railway labor discussions providing the main incentives for a cautious attitude. E. A. Pierce & Co.

It will be unwise to follow rallies too far and the better policy will be to lighten up on all such bulges. —J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

We see little ground for going to extreme either way in making longer term business predictions.—J. S. Bache & Co.

DIORAMA TEST DEPICTS SHIPS OF VIKINGS

"Boy, oh boy! What fun!"

That's what boys and girls of New England are saying about the famous World Museum Dioramas which appear every week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

These dioramas are the latest and most fascinating game for boys and girls throughout New England.

All that is necessary is to "get into" this game that provides a lot of fun are shears, a little paste and some ordinary brown wrapping paper. With these materials on hand you start cutting out and building the Diorama.

When it is assembled you have completed another part of a World Museum, each of which depicts something new and different. One of the first dioramas showed the Coronation procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey. The following Sunday the diorama was entitled "Treasure Hunters of the sea."

This Sunday the Diorama will depict the dragon ships of the Vikings and, boys and girls, reserve your copy of the Boston Sunday Advertiser now. Sunday is only two days away.

MARTHA GIVES ICE CREAM RECIPES

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WMEX

Summer days coming mean ice cream, that great favorite of Americans everywhere. And what variety we have to choose from! We can make a different variety every time.

Of course you'll select the little can with the orange and blue label for your ice cream making. Or you may prefer a sherbet for luncheon or to serve with the meat course.

Then, too, a fudge sauce and a butterscotch sauce is available for those just out of cream from the can. Think of the preparation already done for you in spotlessly clean kitchens.

Remember that only natural fruits have been used in this ice box freeze, full, juicy strawberries and sun-ripened, golden pink peaches. Only the purest cane sugar is used in the manufacture of this delicious ice cream mixture and pure maple syrup from Vermont, truly a New England product.

This ice cream is easy to make and grand to eat. It may be made in your automatic refrigerator or in the hand freezer. Six simple steps provide this ice cream for your table.

1. Pour ice cream mix (any flavor you wish—nine to choose from) into a bowl.

2. Fill empty can with whole milk and gradually add to mixture, stirring until thoroughly mixed.

3. Whip one jar (½ pint) heavy cream stiff. Add blended mixture and milk to whipped cream gradually, blending thoroughly.

4. Pour the mixture, as prepared above, into freezing tray and turn temperature control to coldest point.

5. Freeze ice cream until "mushy," then stir thoroughly to give it an extra smooth and creamy texture.

6. When frozen, turn control halfway back to keep the ice cream ready for serving.

DIRECTIONS FOR MIXING AND FREEZING IN HAND FREEZER

EXTRA RICH—Drain the contents of one can into the freezer container, add one cup milk and one jar (½ pint) heavy cream (not whipped). Pack with ice and salt, and churn as usual. Makes 6 pints. Serves 6 to 7.

Family Style—Mix together two cans ice box freeze with one pint heavy cream (not whipped), ¼ cup sugar, and 1 quart milk in freezer container. Pack and freeze. This makes almost 2 quarts.

Perhaps you'd like to know some of the fancy ice creams that can be made from these little cans of mixture.

FRESH CUSTARD ICE CREAM

1. Beat one egg and combine with ¾ cup milk. Heat together in double boiler until thick. Cool thoroughly.

2. Empty one can vanilla, chocolate or coffee flavor ice box freeze into a bowl and stir in the cooled milk and egg mixture. Chill in refrigerator.

3. Whip one jar (½ pint) heavy cream stiff and stir in chilled custard mixture, blending thoroughly.

4. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze until "mushy." Then stir thoroughly and continue freezing as quickly as possible.

PEPPERMINT CANDY ICE CREAM

To partially frozen vanilla ice cream mix, mix ¼ pound pink-and-white striped peppermint stick candy ground up fairly fine, and finish freezing.

CHOCOLATE MINT

Mix chocolate ice cream mix according to directions and add ½ teaspoon peppermint extract, and freeze.

PEANUT BRITTLE ICE CREAM

To partially frozen vanilla ice cream mix add ¼ pound crisp peanut brittle, finely chopped, and finish freezing.

FRUIT CREAM

Mash 3 bananas through a sieve, add 2 tablespoons sugar, and one of lemon juice. Mix this with one can Pineapple-Orange ice cream which has been partially frozen, and finish freezing. You may turn this into individual paper cups after the fruit has been added and garnish with maraschino cherries and mint leaves.

HARLEQUIN ICE CREAM

Freeze two or three trays of different flavors ice cream, mix and serve one on top of the other. Or serve in brick form and cut at the table. Or empty freezing tray turn upside down on platter and hold steaming cloth over it for a second.

These cans of ice cream can be used in any number of different ways besides as the base for a delicious ice cream.

The fruit mixtures can be used fresh from the can on plain ice cream for dessert.

The fudge and butterscotch sauce can be used on plain ice cream or ice cream for cottage pudding or sponge cake.

An easily prepared Bavarian cream may be made by adding 1 tablespoon plain gelatin dissolved in ¼ cup hot water to any ice cream recipe. Chill thoroughly until firm, and serve.

To one can of strawberry ice cream mix add 1 jar of heavy cream whipped stiff. Spread on top and between layers of Washington pie.

A nutritious drink for children and invalids may be made by adding 1 tablespoon ice cream mix to egg nog or milk shakes.

More MDC Hikes Set for Sunday

With Harvard and Radcliffe students debating over the 10-mile hikes which the Metropolitan District Commission sponsors, Sunday's jaunt in the Blue Hills is expected to bring out the student hikers to settle the feud.

Last week when a group of Harvard students wrote to Edward A. Farrell, supervisor of recreation in the MDC-WPA, terming Radcliffe girls fragile and unable to cover the 10-mile distance, Radcliffe girls are expected to try to disprove the claim.

The hike will start at the junction of Randolph ave. and Chickatawbut road in Milton at 11:00 a. m. Sunday.

While the ten milers are climbing over the Chickatawbut region another party will meet at the base of Great Blue Hill at 3 p. m. for a nature walk.

Tomorrow afternoon at Waverley Oaks in Belmont children will hold another day of recreation which will include baseball games, relay races, and other outdoor activities. A nature walk will start at 2 o'clock.

Find Co-Ed of Many Loves Dead in Car

Redwood City, Cal., May 28 (A.P.)—Miss Ann Pingree, 20, prominent Stanford University coed who was said by a brother to have had "lots of fellows" and no "long quarantine," was found dead in a gas-filled automobile. Deputy Coroner John Layng expressed belief she committed suicide.

MONEY TO LOAN

Necessities of Life . . .

Every New England family must spend substantial sums for the necessities of life. When savings have been drained by sickness or trouble, the Shawmut Monthly Payment Plan helps responsible people with regular income to borrow in one sum to meet this problem. Available to Boston and nearby communities, responsible persons may make borrowing on this plan at a lower cost than ever before, with systematic repayment over an extended period. You need not be a depositor to use this service, available at our main office and at our sixteen Shawmut branches.

It's never too early or too late to plan for a home of your own. The good says:

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

How many men and women who are past middle age only said say, "Oh, if I had only bought a home when I was younger—or what values were lower; I'd be comfortable in my old age, too."

Know the joy of real living and security in your old age by buying a home of your own NOW.

Choose your home from the "100 Best Home Values" listed on this page—carefully selected by real estate brokers and private owners at their most reasonable prices—the one home they consider their best buy. Inspect your new home TODAY!

National Aviation Day: For PROTECTIVE PEACE

TODAY, our first National Aviation Day, ought to result in making the American people AVIATION-CONSCIOUS.

Last December, America, a FIRST-POWER, rated SEVENTH as an air-power.

And we are NOT moving up.

France, Russia, Italy, Germany, Great Britain and Japan are all leaving us far behind.

Japan, which is slightly ahead of us, has gone in for air-expansion on a grand scale.

At a conference of the National Aeronautical Association, Major General Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, declared that THE DAY OF THE 3000-MILE BOMBER HAS ARRIVED.

America can only be protected from an air force by an air force.

General Westover further said:

"AN AIR FORCE IS THE MOST EFFICIENT MEANS OF NATIONAL DEFENCE TODAY."

And that is the meaning of National Aviation Day. It is a gesture for a defensive peace—a protected peace.

It is NOT militarstic. An adequate air-force is a form of OVERHEAD INSURANCE.

TODAY also will, let us hope, bring home to us the necessity for a MERCHANT MARINE OF THE AIR.

Our commercial air-forces must be developed just as our land transportation forces have been developed and our Merchant Marine is about to be developed.

We are laggards in the one spot that will be vital to us—THE AIR.

Let us make a beginning today to protect our country, to defend our peace.

Let us make our America safe from invasion by air as well as by land and by sea.

MAKE NATIONAL AVIATION DAY A LANDMARK IN OUR HISTORY.

Wings Over Liberty

By Nelson Harding

This day we have dedicated
To the cause of aviation,
To a patriotic interest
In our country's flying progress.

Aviation day will make us
Mindful of our nation's safety
Of the need of strong air forces
To defend our priceless freedom.

Break Red Film Grip

THE Daughters of the American Revolution, meeting in New York, struck as only a real patriotic organization can—and should—strike at the Communistic propaganda going on in the motion pictures of America.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"SUCH PICTURES SOW SEEDS OF DISCORD, BREED CLASS HATRED AND DISCREDIT THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL FORM OF GOVERNMENT."

The resolution further asks the National Board of Review and the State censorship boards either to ban these pictures, which are inspired by Moscow, or to eliminate from them those parts that "ADVOCATE THE OVERTHROW OF OUR CONSTITUTIONAL FORM OF GOVERNMENT."

This resolution of the Daughters of the American Revolution is commendably in line with the campaign now being waged by other patriotic groups to prevent the further tainting of our pictures with the propaganda for Russian Communism which goes on quite often under the mask of "newsreel" shots and "educational pictures."

The Soviet films now in this country are MADE DIRECTLY under the supervision of the Soviet Government.

They are made EXPRESSLY for the purpose of glorifying the most abhorrent slave-state of modern times and of throwing discredit and ridicule on the institutions of democratic government.

They are pictures of HATE, TERROR and THREAT.

What they call ACTION are scenes of INCENDIARISM and outright MURDER.

This campaign against Comintern-inspired pictures is NOT a campaign against the freedom of pictures.

It is a campaign to PRESERVE THEIR FREEDOM from the insidious inroads of that which would destroy their freedom—COMMUNISM.

The Pre-Primary Doom

THE repeal of the Pre-primary Convention Law is a victory for Governor Hurley and the Democratic legislators who supported his efforts to rid the State of this useless legislation.

Pre-primaries, from the very beginning, proved a handy tool for political machines. In theory and in practice they were the antithesis of democracy.

Arguments that they made it possible for minority groups to have representation in State offices were hypocrisy. What they did make possible was the domination of an election by professional politicians and office-holders.

The people were never fooled; they saw through the pre-primary scheme at the start.

As early as 1932, when the acceptance of the law was submitted to referendum, 792,000 blanks were cast out of a total of 1,600,000 ballots.

At the two elections held under the statute, only 10 and 15 per cent, respectively, of the registered voters took the trouble to go to the polls.

And in 1934, although each party was entitled to at least one convention delegate from every town in the State, Democrats failed to name delegates in 47 towns and Republicans in 17.

Thus it is with every degree of truth and honesty that Governor Hurley tells us:

"Pre-primaries were unpopular. They were a wantonly wasteful expenditure of the taxpayers' money. They were grossly undemocratic. They were destructive of party organization and respect. They imposed an unfair burden upon candidates for State offices. THEY WERE WHOLLY UNNECESSARY."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

This modern yawp about being oneself in marriage—it can't be done.

You can't be yourself in marriage. As a matter of fact, you can't be yourself in any department of normal life. From your first gurgle to your last gasp you are inevitably and increasingly part of the world in which you live—part of the people with whom you live.

Elsie Robinson

There is no such thing as perfect self-expression. Everything you do is conditioned by the acts and attitudes of other people, and expresses them as well as you. Every act must be a compromise if you would live harmoniously in a crowded world.

Part of that act expresses your desire, part of it expresses the other fellow's and part of it expresses the desires and decisions of millions of men long dead.

The only persons who have 100 per cent self-expression are in insane asylums. That's why they're there. They'd raise Cain anywhere else. People who will not, or cannot co-operate and compromise are as dangerous as wild beasts.

AN IMPOSSIBILITY

And what is true of life in general is also true of marriage—only more so. This notion that Betsy Brown can be herself after marrying Bill White is pure bunkum. Betsy can and should develop her individuality, and contribute the tang and tempo of that individuality to their ensemble.

But she cannot ever again be herself if she is successfully married to Bill.

Betsy ceased being herself the first time she kissed Bill. From that date on, she was a part of Bill and he was a part of her. They were no longer two separate individuals who liked each other. Their lives had merged. Henceforth they were to share each other's gladness and sadness, madness and badness.

That mysterious mingling is marriage. It is the only real marriage.

If it doesn't happen to you, then you're not married—and all the churches and licenses in Christendom can't make you one.

TEAM WORK

Nor are we merely bound by the mysteries in marriage. We are bound quite as firmly by more practical and tangible things. We are bound by grocery bills and rents and neighborhood quarrels and broken screen doors and little Jimmy's tonsils.

Such considerations may, and usually do, seem very contemptible to flighty souls longing for self-expression.

But just try to do without eating for a while and see how long your soul stays flery. Dig up your own rent money, lady, and see how much chance you have for self-expression.

IF A HUSBAND CRAMPS YOUR STYLE, WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE A BOSS WOULD DO TO YOU?

If you must be yourself, dig a burrow or get a soap box and proceed to do your stuff—BUT DON'T GET MARRIED.

Marriage is team work, or it's nothing at all.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

One of John D. Rockefeller's greatest achievements was winning the favor, confidence and affection of a public which envied or disliked him because of his immense fortune and some of his methods in accumulating it.

Thirty or 40 years ago he was cartooned and lampooned and assailed all over the country. He was the symbol then, in the public mind, of predatory wealth.

Long before he died he had become one of the most revered and most loved of the nation's rich men.

Other men have amassed huge fortunes. Rockefeller won the admiration and affection of his most bitter critics by the intelligent, human and unselfish way in which he used his wealth. It was not just the fact that he gave away more than one-half billion dollars in his various philanthropies that made him such a great benefactor of humanity. It was the intelligence he used in making the gifts.

It was his idea to use his money in the way which would do the most good for mankind.

Rockefeller once said, "I believe it is every man's religious duty to get as he can honestly and to give all he can." But his gifts were not mere donations; they were investments for the welfare of the human race. He made as much of a business of giving as he had of accumulating wealth. He gave to educational institutions, to churches, to the advancement of science and to welfare organizations.

The purposes of these philanthropies was to promote the spiritual, mental and physical improvement of mankind. They remain as living monuments to his humanitarianism.

It is a pity that Rockefeller did not realize his ambition to live 100 years. But that he stretched out his life as long as he did—he would have been 98 in July—was little short of a miracle. For years he was a sufferer from stomach trouble, was compelled to follow the most rigid diet, and had to work harder at the business of living than he had in making a fortune.

Many a man working for wages has consoled himself with the thought that "poor as I am I can enjoy a square meal which is something Rockefeller with all his millions can't do."

Antiphanes, a poet of centuries ago, wrote:

"A man can hide all things excepting twain—
"That he is drunk, and that he is in love."

But in the enforcement of modern traffic laws, we have found there is considerable difficulty in finding out whether a motorist is drunk. It may be established that he has had one or more drinks, but determining whether he is drunk is quite a complicated process.

Mary, Leota, Mona and Roberta Keys—daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Flake Keys of Hollis, Okla.—are to be graduated soon from Baylor University of Texas.

Birth and the fact they have lived nearly 22 years make these four young ladies quite famous. They are quadruplets. And according to calculations made by the Census Bureau, the chance of quadruplet births is only about one in more than 700,000.

There is more to the solution of the unemployment problem than merely finding or creating jobs for men who now are idle. It is necessary that men be capable of holding down the jobs which are offered them. One company recently reported it had hired approximately 300 men who had been on relief or public employment and reported only "about thirty-five remained, others were released or quit because they lacked either skill or the will to work."

In spite of the fact that there are estimated to be 8 or 10 millions of unemployed in this country, the Warner & Swasey Company of Cleveland, has found, through a survey of a number of concerns in various important industries, there actually is a serious shortage of skilled labor. Out of 229 firms queried, 195 reported they were experiencing a shortage of skilled labor.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

It happens every spring to every housewife!

She's heard the same old "song" over and over again; it goes like this: "Gosh, Honey, y'look allin! Why do you make such a big fuss over a little spring-cleaning-in?" What this boiled down is SYSTEM—that's all! Why do you let a little thing like this get you down?"

For, alas, there never lived a husband who didn't think that the Chateau de Cande, or Buckingham Palace, could be spring-cleaned in an hour or so, if a woman would only get things "organized" and use a little brain-matter beforehand. What she lacks is the ability to make all the details co-ordinate.

It seems that if you follow HIS "system" all you have to do is to "turn on the steam and put out" and then give orders. After that, you can sit down at the piano and merrily tinkle out Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" while the work goes on as automatically and smoothly as a Rolls Royce on a new boulevard.

Just a matter of "routine!" First scramble out of the closets, take an airing, sprinkle themselves with camphor, and give the merry ha-ha to the moths as they slip back—each into its own individual tar-bag.

According to his "system," painters, window-cleaners, and handy-men will come running breathlessly at the first sweet note of your voice over the telephone. Every man knows his exact job and rushes cheerfully through it with a song on his lips.

Doors never stick; nobody ever fails you; plumbers and storagemen always arrive on the dot; the painters read your mind and always paint things the exact shade you wanted. Nothing can POSSIBLY go wrong—if you ORGANIZE—and "use your brain!"

Of course, here are some women who will tire of playing Mendelssohn's "Spring Song." And there are other women who couldn't play it, anyhow. Oh very well, let them play "I've Been Working on the Railroad"—because that's how every wife feels after spring cleaning—system or no system!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 28—Thoughts while strolling. The new editor of the Times: Dr. John Finley. The town's greatest walker. Celebrated Color: Old King, Rex and Russ. Add bantam Brummels. A. C. Blumenthal and Jules Glaenzer. Crack reporter of the era: Alva Johnson. What's become of Dashiell Hammett?

Simile: As immaculate as a Floyd Gibbons eye patch. Add minor feminine enthusiasms: Lupe Velez and Martha Raye. Babe Ruth can still make the crowds stand and gape, at the ball parks. Two incurable rumors: That Will Hays is to lose his job and that Major Bowes is slipping.

Rhyme: For conversational pace, few can top Ilka Chase. How the rich live note: Anne Morgan dines on a banana and glass of skimmed milk once a week and goes to bed at 8:30. Night club chorus: Erskine Gwynne. With his dimples.

Chin-chin: Doris Duke and George Gershwin. Torch singers come and go but Ethel Merman still gets my vote. Nothing produces poker faces like tennis. Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, for instance. Captain Eddie Rickenbacker is graying about the temples.

Memory: Scouring steel knives with fine ashes. George Raft has certainly been a boon to the high-waisted pants business. Some day Morris Guest ought to fool his friends and bust out in a derby. They say London is biting its nails over the Coronation. It was like buying seats to see a star and seeing an understudy.

Vaudeville die-hards see hope for a revival of their favorite amusement in the popularity of variety programs on the radio. Such as those by Rudy Vallee, Joe Cook, Fred Allen, Fred Astaire and Ike Bike. Many new radio bills now being readied are to stress such acts that used to fill the two-day. Thus the enthusiasts believe the younger generation is acquiring a taste for the "spice of variety" and will welcome it, when and if it comes back.

Theatrical producers believe a delayed opening will jinx it—and rather than face the superstition often open a show on schedule, even though they feel certain it is not ready. Campbell's three most costly flops were delayed and the production chief broke-rapid Charles B. Dillingham was postponed three times.

Producers, of course, believe in the axiom that critics, but favorable reviews are not always unfailing barometers. The approval of producers seek are those of the ticket agencies. If they regard a play as "a hog" it is usually in the bag for a run.

The ticket agents are the boys who back their opinions with cash on the line for choice seats, often for as long as 12 weeks in advance.

One of the better agent prognosticators was the late Louis Cohen, a flashily dressed, slangy fellow who could not read or write. It was Cohen who coined the expression "good theater." When he said a show was "good theater" it was generally in for a run.

I still like to go down to a 34th street department store now and then and gape upon the tall Dolores-looking girl with a monocle at the Book Information Desk. Nothing lends haughtiness to femininity like a monocle. The first woman monocled I ever saw was a girl at a table in front of Du Pome on Montparnasse.

A sommelier told me she was an art student from Galesburg, Ill., and that she had only been in Paris a month.

On that slick and successful whizz known as The Blue Train from Paris to Monte Carlo one day I met actor Lyon a-snoozing in the diner. When the waiter brought his finger bowl, he flicked his fork across the virgin glass plinked into the bowl.

I tried to hide a grin at what I thought was a boner, but he fished it out, polished it brightly and clapped it in his eye again. It was his way of giving his monocle a morning bath.

One learns a lot traveling.

The veteran Daniel Frohman is still correspondent for Mary Anderson. Every few months they exchange letters dealing with news of the old days and some tidings of the new. There are many who do not know Miss Anderson still lives. She retired from the stage in 1909 at the peak of a career that was as glamorous as that of Mrs. Fiske. She has a son on the stage.

Britain's Chamberlains

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

"I've had my hour, I pass into the shade, but for you life lies before you."

Premier Stanley Baldwin is speaking to ten thousand youths gathered in Prince Albert Hall, London, while from all over the empire, a world-wide audience hears his words by radio.

So departs from the rulership of Britain and from the guidance of earth's greatest empire, Baldwin, the sturdy old Tory who stands for all that conservative England holds down the very exemplification of duty performed at any cost.

He steered the Ship of State through stormy waters, determined to keep the peace, upholding democratic government against all the dangerous isms that had brought turmoil and great fear to Europe. His services have been great, but, doubtless, history will place him as the British Prime Minister who forced a much-loved king from the throne.

A POWERFUL FAMILY

His successor, Neville Chamberlain, of the Birmingham House of Chamberlain, has achieved what was denied the ambition of his noted father, Joseph, and of his celebrated brother, Austen—the premiership. Upon his shoulders, more than any other statesman, rests the terrific responsibility of preserving the peace of Europe.

All three Chamberlains moved from the blast furnaces of Birmingham to Whitehall. A most interesting breed, these middle-class Chamberlains. Oddly enough, they have been both Tories and reformers. In housing, bank control, slum clearance and social welfare programs they have been more daring than many of our Washington New Dealers.

Years ago I had a glimpse of Joseph Chamberlain in Parliament. Some clever Birmingham sartorial moulder had poured him into his morning coat. His orchid, never absent from his lapel, was a gunfalon—his trade mark, like General Dawes' suede-shining pipe, J. Ham Lewis' haberdashery and whiskers, La Follette's pompadour, McKinley's carnation and John Sharp Williams' umbrella.

I was interested then in inquiring about the origin of Mr. Chamberlain's self-dramatization, and there came to light a facet of the shrewd Chamberlain mind which, it seems to me, should be in the beginner's manual of all statesmen.

He was a careful, meticulous conformist in all essentials and, hence, could be a non-conformist in anything not really important. The orchid, the monocle and the morning coat were all coldly premeditated. It came about this way:

A GENTLEMAN

Joe Chamberlain, in dress and demeanor, was just a run-of-the-mill Birmingham business man and politician. Planning to branch out in national politics, he schooled himself in suave, unaffected and grammatical speech, in the ornate, rococo oratory of the Victorian age.

He had some disturbing ideas to take to London, and he sought the protective coloring of outer conformity. Advance word of the coming of this iron-monger, this parvenu, had reached stuffy government circles.

Chamberlain had been fanning up ideas which had an ominous suggestion of republicanism, and Queen Victoria was agitated. There was a good deal of eyebrow-lifting in Whitehall. They awaited an unseemly disturber. Chamberlain stopped the show.

He had an Oxford accent, and he outmatched the best of them in cut and fit of his clothes and his orchidaceous trimmings.

Austen Chamberlain inherited his father's stage properties including the monocle and orchid; Neville, his ideas and his ability. Austen went for with his orchid, but Neville seems to be going farther with his ideas and doesn't need the orchid and the monocle.

In 1918, when Neville Chamberlain went to Parliament, he was nearly 50 years of age. He is long and gaunt, with greying hair, and his eyes are blue and deep set. He is a heavy rather than a juvenile, as any good casting director would place him. He is bedded about with impenetrable reserve. He entertains occasionally, but not lavishly; likes hunting and fishing and long cross-country walks; likes to shoot around in old slacks, puttering with a spade.

TYPICALLY BRITISH

It's hard for us to understand such enigmas of British statesmanship. Neville Chamberlain is frankly, in fact, vehemently, a Tory, and yet, when he was made minister of health in 1923, he started a housing program in which he abolished about 500,000 new houses, affronting rugged individualism in the most un-Tory-like manner.

When lord mayor of Birmingham, as his father had been, he established the first municipal Bank of England.

He's a bit dull at times, but that does not matter in England. Too much brilliance is often suspect there.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

John D. Rockefeller's life of ninety-eight years belied the line from the New England primer:

"Our life is but a span."

When he looked back from the peak of his nineties, it must have seemed to him that he had lived a tremendously long life.

From 1839 to 1937 is the span of the modern age. When Rockefeller was born the steamboat wasn't very old and the railway was the new wonder. None of the marvels of today were even dreamed of. Darwin's "Origin of Species," which revolutionized the world of thought, was still 20 years unborn in 1839. Edison had not yet been born. Twenty American states were still to be admitted to the Union. Queen Victoria had just ascended the throne and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was still undreamed of by Harriet Beecher Stowe.

When Rockefeller died all these things had become as inconsiderable a part of history as the birth of Galileo or the campaigns of Jean of Arc.

Rockefeller's life was not a "span." It was a WHOLE CYCLE OF HISTORY.

If, as dispatches say, Soviet Russia will take possession of the North Pole, the unprecedented question arises as to whether a nation can declare an immense ice-floe national territory.

The North Pole is the Arctic ocean covered with ice. No nation can take possession of a bit of the open sea, frozen or not frozen, and not violate international law.

If there is land under the ice-packs at the pole, Lieutenant Peary, of the United States Navy, took possession of it in the name of and with the flag of the United States in 1909.

There is not likely to be a war over this unusual incident, but here is a fine controversy over which some cunning diplomats may concoct their unexcelled brains.

"I never worry about anything because worrying makes you roll over and wear out your clothes," says Will Mahoney, an 88-year-old Indiana farmer.

This is witty; but mankind will in spite of all its unprecedented against worry contrive to worry just as it always has done and always will. The artificial wall still remains just common human nature.

Worry, as a matter of fact, when you come to think of it, is the response of the organism to the urge to progress and the father of all achievement.

If the American colonists had not worried about the taxes they were being taxed to a rag, wed zero—have become a nation. If Halzac had not worried himself to a bone over debts, the world would not have had his great novels.

If Walter Reed hadn't worried over yellow fever, the world might not have got rid of it. BUT have a grip on your worries.

Mark Twain, an inveterate reader of newspapers, observed through the mouth of Pudd'nhead Wilson:

"TRUTH IS STRANGER THAN FICTION, BUT IT IS BECAUSE FICTION IS OBLIGED TO STICK TO POSSIBILITIES. TRUTH ISN'T."

Here are some of the doings of man and beast of the last few days that give fiction a good run for its money:

A runaway horse in Oswego, N. Y., stopped so suddenly before a red traffic light that it practically screeched. This brings up the question as to whether there are colors that horses hate.

Lucius F. Ballis of Danville, Ill., 81, has built a funeral pyre on his farm, patterned after the last King of Assyria, set the fashion for public cremation by building a pyre in Chapman's park grounds and then tossing in all his wives, his treasures and himself.

Mourners in Managua, Nicaragua, desert a funeral in ride on a runaway hearse that had enjoyed themselves for two hours, they proceeded with the body. To these happy people BOTH life and death are just a merry-go-round.

And maybe that's what it really is—with some of us riding a goat and some with the brass-ring in their pockets.
